Editorial

By Maggie Thompson

• Before I go further, let me say hello to the retailers who may not have been following Comics Buyer's Guide on a regular basis. Thanks to Diamond, we're bringing you this issue to show you the sort of material you can count on receiving, when you get CBG. The price guide runs only once a month (in the first-dated issue of each month), but you (and your customers) can find all sorts of other information in our pages, too.

Diamond Vice President of Purchasing Bill Schanes said recently, "For professionals and fans alike, CBG is the acknowledged dean of magazines for the comics industry." We want to be sure all store owners, in the midst of industry contortions, see CBG so they can make use of the material we bring every week. (Publisher Greg Loescher commented to me recently that, according to our surveys, CBG readers say they spend an average of $2200 annually on comics, and 83.2% spend the majority of their comics dollars in comics shops. Seems to me that this says, again, that an educated customer base is a customer base that, aware of all the neat stuff that's out there, will support that material financially.)

• How was it that I started last week's editorial? Something about figuring it was going to be an ordinary week — and then we got all the news about Golden and Broadway. When will I learn? I came in this week figuring at last we'd have a routine time of it — but by mid-afternoon Tuesday we were awash in one gloomy Marvel report after another. (See page 6.)

I watched the financial news reports I could find on TV on the morning of Nov. 13, and of them all, only CNN Business Day reported the Marvel news. The text of the feature (which was accompanied by shots of Marvel characters and by footage of a comics store interior with kids) began:

"Marvel Entertainment is on the brink of bankruptcy, but there may be a superhero with deep pockets to pull that company from despair. Enter Ron Perelman. As the controlling shareholder of Marvel, Perelman is offering to invest $350 million in the troubled company in a deal that would dilute Marvel stock by 80%." Prior value of the stock had wavered at about $5; if diluted by 80%, of course, that would bring it to a worth of $1 per share.

An interesting spin, no? Ron Perelman, super-hero?

• You know how it is with nerdy comics buffs like us: trying to lighten the mood of concern we're all feeling. Last week, we were mulling Poky Little Puppy Comics. This week, we brainstormed the idea of raising money for Marvel by having would-be publishers pay to license Marvel characters for their own publications. A special Marvel-Licensed universe could be created, which would include a "Not Marvel" logo and a big disclaimer: "Events in this issue take place in the Marvel-L universe and have no impact on Marvel continuity." Now, of course, small publishers wouldn't be able to afford the big characters, but a comics club could pool its resources and produce, say, a three-issue Patsy Walker Marvel-L mini-series. (And think of what you'd have there: a readers-design-the-fashions potential, a hint of a Satanic curse, and a busty superheroine — all in one eventual graphic novel.)

The Adventures of Willy Lumpkin shouldn't cost more than $100 for a Marvel-L one-shot, should it? Or am I low-balling it too much? Cost might depend on the rights the licensee wanted to reserve, but all sorts of complicated deals could be arranged without ever losing the concept of a concurrently published core group of "official" Marvel-continuity titles. Marvel could raise money the way an assortment of charities do, when people bid to spend an afternoon with a celebrity, for example, and that money would go to support the basic business.

Do you think reading too many stock market analyses in one day is making me punchy?

Grim outlook for Marvel makes national news

Stock, bond values plummet as commentators suggest bankruptcy is possibility for industry's biggest publisher

By Joyce Greenholdt

Tuesday, Nov. 12, Marvel Entertainment Group Inc. announced third-quarter losses and financial problems that sent its stock and bond prices tumbling. The proposal from partial-owner Andrews Group which followed brought national attention to the country's largest comic-book publishing company, including reports on CNN and in The Wall Street Journal.

Reuters, a British news agency, reported that, according to an Andrews Group spokesman, the proposal would involve Andrews purchasing 410 million new Marvel shares; there are currently between 100 million and 102 million Marvel shares outstanding.

According to The Wall Street Journal, the proposal would allow Andrews to buy the new shares for 85¢ a share, well under their current market value.

Andrews Group is an indirect subsidiary of Ronald Perelman's company MacAndrews & Forbes; Perelman is also the controlling stockholder and a director of Marvel Entertainment Group.

Marvel stock began falling after its two announcements, as the Dow Jones industrial average was soaring to reach a new record high during the week. From its Monday closing price of 4⅝, Marvel stock fell to 2¾ by the end of Tuesday's trading, and a volume of 3,240,000 shares changed hands. Marvel prices inched up the following two days, closing Wednesday at 2⅞ and Thursday at 2⅞. By Friday, Nov. 15, Marvel rallied to close at 3⅜.

The Nov. 13 Journal report said:

Analysts have been bracing for bad news at Marvel since the company signaled last month it would post operating losses in the third and fourth quarters, but yesterday's specific disclosure suggests that the problems at Marvel may be deeper than previously thought.

Some stock-market investors were upset that Mr. Perelman was proposing to buy so much stock at a discount as a price for the rescue. Within the past year, the stock has traded as high as $13.375.

Bond-market investors were also perturbed by reports that two big bondholders sold $70 million of Marvel bonds on [Nov. 8] after conversations Thursday with Howard Gittis, vice chairman of Mr. Perelman's Andrews Group Inc.

Through a spokesman, Mr. Gittis confirmed that he spoke Thursday with officials of Fidelity Investments and Putnam Investments, both of Boston, but added that he was simply trying to find out what kind of recapitalization "would be palatable" to major bondholders, and "didn't provide specific information" concerning Mr. Perelman's plans.

Marvel bonds also tumbled after the proposal was announced. According to a Wall Street Journal report, "Marvel Holdings Inc.'s zero-coupon senior secured debentures due 1988 fell by 20 points to a price of 18." Collateral for the bonds consists of Marvel Entertainment shares, the report said, and the bonds' trading price had fallen from 76 since Marvel first announced Oct. 8 that it would report a third-quarter loss.

A story published in the Los Angeles Times about the proposal quoted Phelps Hoyt, an analyst at KDP Investment Advisors, "I don't think Marvel will take the first offer and people may find it offensive. This was a very low blow."

Wednesday, Nov. 13, Marvel shareholder Steve Grossbard filed suit to block the Andrews proposal in Delaware Chancery Court, according to another article in the Los Angeles Times. Grossbard said the plan would unfairly dilute the value of the outstanding shares, bringing public stockholders' interest in Marvel from about 20% to 4%. The article said that, according to Hoyt, if the proposal is accepted, Marvel shares would be worth about $1.70 each. The suit also claimed that Perelman exercises control over the firm and its other directors, rendering the board incapable of reaching a fair decision on the proposal.

Andrews Group sends investment proposal to Marvel Entertainment Group

Andrews offers cash, Toy Biz stock in exchange for heavily discounted new Marvel shares

Marvel Entertainment Group Inc. (NYSE: MRV) announced Nov. 12 that it has received a proposal from Andrews Group Incorporated for an equity investment in Marvel. It is expected that any purchase by Andrews of equity in Marvel will result in substantial dilution to existing Marvel shares, including shares that serve as collateral for Marvel holding company bonds.

The proposed equity infusion by Andrews is expected to be subject to a number of significant conditions, including Toy Biz Inc. (NYSE: TBZ) becoming a wholly owned subsidiary of Marvel. A copy of the proposal has been forwarded to a special committee of outside directors, who are not affiliated with Andrews, for consideration. A complete text of the Andrews proposal follows:

I am writing to propose, for your consideration, an investment by Andrews Group Incorporated ("Andrews") in Marvel Entertainment Group Inc. ("Marvel"), pursuant to which Andrews would acquire from Marvel a number of shares of Marvel common stock, par value 1¢ per share (the "Marvel Common Stock"), representing 80.1% of the outstanding shares of the Marvel Common Stock after giving effect to the acquisition (the "Andrews Investment"). The purchase price for the shares would be $350 million in cash or, at the option of Andrews, an equal value of shares of Class A common stock, par value 1¢ per share (the "Toy Biz Common Stock"), of Toy Biz Inc. ("Toy Biz"), or a combination of the foregoing.

Any contribution by Andrews to Marvel of shares of Toy Biz Common Stock would be made in the context of Toy Biz becoming a wholly owned subsidiary of Marvel. In that connection, at Andrews' option, all or a portion of the purchase price for Andrews Investment could be paid through the delivery of Toy Biz Common Stock. The shares of Toy Biz Common Stock to be so transferred would be valued on the basis of the cost to Andrews of acquiring Toy Biz Common Stock.

In anticipation of the Andrews Investment and Toy Biz becoming a wholly owned subsidiary of Marvel, Andrews has agreed to purchase all of the Toy Biz Common Stock owned by Isaac Perlmutter and Avi Arad. The consummation of the Andrews Investment is subject to an agreement for the acquisition of Toy Biz having been executed and all conditions to that agreement having been satisfied.

Consummation of the Andrews Investment will require certain consents under and amendments to the Marvel credit agreements. Such consents and amendments would allow Marvel to obtain the additional borrowing capacity under its credit agreements that Marvel requires. Moreover, the Andrews investment is subject to the satisfactory resolution of a number of issues under the Marvel parent holding company indentures, including that any Marvel Common Stock purchased by Andrews not be subject to the liens thereunder.

Our proposal is, of course, also conditioned upon the execution of a definitive agreement which would contain appropriate representations, warranties, covenants, and conditions customary for transactions of this nature. In addition, any definitive agreement would be subject to the approval of Andrews' Board of Directors.

In our view, the Andrews Investment represents a significant opportunity for Marvel and its stockholders. The Andrews Investment would provide Marvel with desperately needed liquidity and financial flexibility. As such, it is a fundamental predicate to a financial restructuring essential if Marvel is to resolve its current difficulties and have the opportunity, over time, to prosper.

We understand that, in light of overlapping equity ownership between Andrews and Marvel, you have formed a special committee of independent directors (the "Special Committee") to consider the Andrews Investment. Both we and our financial and legal advisors are at your disposal to render whatever assistance or provide any further details with respect to the Andrews Investment that you may require. Moreover, we are all prepared to meet with the Special Committee and its legal and financial advisors at your earliest convenience to review the Andrews Investment and any other aspect of Andrews that may be of interest or assistance.

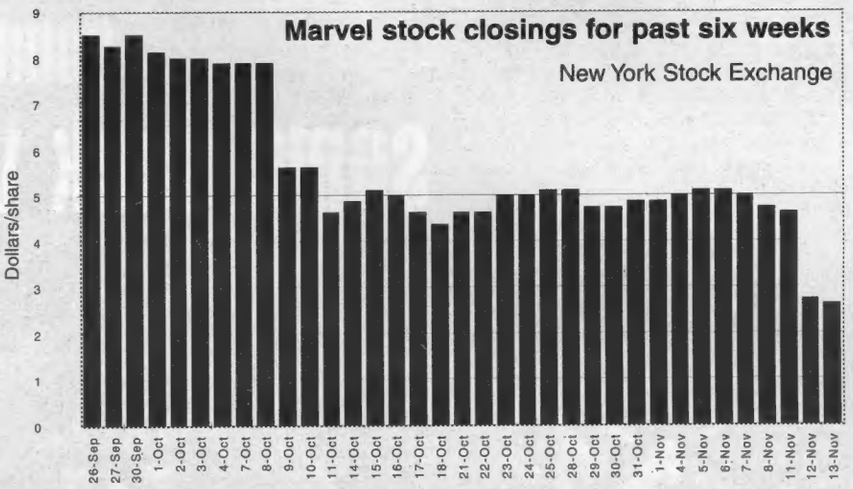
Marvel announces third-quarter results and performance updates

Marvel Entertainment Group, Inc. (NYSE: MRV) announced results for the third quarter and nine months ended Sept. 30, 1996.

For the third quarter, Marvel reported a net loss of 12¢ per share compared to net income of 19¢ in the year ago period. For the nine months, Marvel reported a net loss of 27¢ per share compared to net income of 10¢ in the year ago period. Current year results were affected by lower publishing, trading card, and licensing net revenues partially offset by increased toy and sticker net revenues. Current year results also include a nonrecurring after-tax gain of approximately 12¢ per share from the sale of shares of Toy Biz Inc. (NYSE: TBZ) in August 1996. As a result of continuing trends in its businesses, Marvel expects to report a loss for its fourth quarter ending Dec. 31, 1996, of 25¢ to 30¢ per share and a loss for the full year ending Dec. 31, 1996, of 52¢ to 57¢ per share; estimates of the 1996 loss are expected to include, before corporate overhead and new business development activities, an operating loss of $10-$15 million from Marvel Comics Group publishing and licensing operations, an operating loss of $10-$15 million from Fleer/SkyBox trading card operations, and an operating profit of $15-$20 million from the Panini international operation. Losses for the fourth quarter and year ending Dec. 31, 1996, do not include any special charges as discussed below.



Marvel reported a net loss of 58¢ per share for the quarter ended Dec. 31, 1995, which included $25 million in restructuring charges and $70 million in additional return and inventory obsolescence reserves, and a net loss of 48¢ for the year ended Dec. 31, 1995, which also included $40 million in additional return reserves and inventory obsolescence from the quarter ended June 30, 1995.

Given the unfavorable market conditions in trading cards and publishing, Marvel is evaluating whether there has been an impairment to goodwill and other intangible assets and is considering restructuring and other actions, all of which could result in substantial 1996 year end charges. As of Sept. 30, 1996, Marvel had on its balance sheet goodwill and other intangible assets totaling approximately $600 million of which approximately $375 million relates to trading card operations.

Based on preliminary planning, anticipated market conditions, and restructuring and other actions as described above, the Company is currently forecasting an improvement in operating results in 1997, although it is not anticipated that such improvement would generate sufficient cash to service its existing debt. Preliminary estimates of the 1997 improvement are expected to include, before corporate overhead and new business development activities, an operating contribution of $5-$15 million from Marvel Comics Group, an operating contribution of $25-$35 million from Panini, and an operating loss of $10 million to a break-even performance from Fleer/SkyBox. These estimates could be materially adversely affected by, among other things, changes in the company's markets beyond current expectations.

As previously announced, as a result of Marvel's third-quarter loss, the company failed to satisfy certain financial covenants contained in its credit agreements and had commenced discussions with its agent bank seeking waivers of these covenants and a restructuring of the credit agreements to provide for its cash requirements. Such a restructuring will ultimately require an infusion of new equity capital. Until Marvel receives these waivers, it will not be able to borrow additional amounts under its domestic credit facilities. In addition, as a result of Marvel's failure to satisfy certain financial covenants and in the absence of waivers as of this date, Marvel has reclassified the balance of its long-term debt to current liabilities.

Carl Barks oil painting sets record

A number of new Barks oil painting sales have been reported from 1996. According to The Carl Barks Studio Manager Bill Grandey, more than a dozen have sold.

"Three paintings have sold at the $200,000 mark," he said. "That level has now been broken with a new sale on the secondary market. A total of $230,000 was paid for Trespassers Will Be Ventilated, a 20" x 25" painting." Kerby Confer, a longtime Barks collector, made the acquisition.

Season to be Jolly, a 16" x 20" painting dated 1974, sold for $150,000 to Carl Harper.

Well-known Disney animation collector Peter Merolo acquired The Goose Egg Nugget for $100,000. Dated 1973, it is 16" x 20."

The 1800 people in attendance at the Diseyanna convention Sotheby's auction gave a standing ovation to Carl Barks, and a 9" x 15" Uncle Scrooge watercolor titled Breakfast of Tycoons sold for $10,000 there.

Also during the convention, 295 each of a Barks silkscreen (known to Disneyanna collectors as seri-graphs) sold out in two days. The 14" x 18" rendition of Breakfast of Tycoons was produced for Disney by The Carl Barks Studio.

1997 Pittsburgh Comicon signs promotional deal with McDonalds

The 1997 Pittsburgh Comicon has tapped into an advertising market so powerful that show promoters said they "can almost guarantee that more than one million potential customers will see our advertising."

The Pittsburgh Comicon has signed a promotional deal with the McDonald's Corporation in a cross-marketing plan to place Comicon advertising in 200 McDonald's restaurants. Approximately 1.8 million tray flyers will be placed on every eat-in tray and placed in every take-out bag.

In addition, 450,000 coupons redeemable for $1 off the price of admission to the Comicon will be distributed. The Comicon will donate $1 for every redeemed coupon to the Ronald McDonald House Charity.

According to Comicon Organizer Michael George, "Many comics companies are always saying that we need to attract new readership as well as retain and bring back current and former readership. We can think of no better way to interest new and old comics fans alike than with an advertising campaign of this type and scope. Joining us in this huge endeavor is Diamond Comic Distributors. It is showing their support of both the industry and the Pittsburgh Comicon by providing the capital for at least 50% of the cost of printing these materials.

"This type of advertising campaign only shows the commitment that we feel towards the comics industry in general and the Pittsburgh area in particular. In fact, we have signed a three-year lease with our host facility, the Pittsburgh Radisson and ExpoMart Complex and believe that this show will continue to grow into the best show in the East."

He stressed the importance of professionals and exhibitors' notifying the convention of their intent to attend. "Also important for us to know is if any of the attending professionals — be they artist, writer, or publisher — are planning to produce a special convention product, such as a book, card poster, etc., or donate something special to our annual auctions, benefitting the Western Pennsylvania Make-a-Wish Foundation.

"We work very closely with this wonderful charity, and both our annual auctions and our Charity All-Ages Casino Night benefit them 100%. Of course, in return, the Make-a-Wish Foundation does what it can to make sure the local media produce features advertising the show and this fact. In 1996, the Make-a-Wish Foundation was able to provide the Comicon with coverage in 18 local newspapers."

The 1997 Pittsburgh Comicon is scheduled for April 18-20.

Ernie's Soap Box

Keep an eye on this space for words of wit, wisdom (and wishful thinking).

This week's Topic:

Why Mylar® ?

Why not polyethylene? Poly-others?

We do not preach that your comics will go up in a puff of smoke if you poly-nate them. But we do use plain logic.

1. The Library of Congress & the National Archives, after exhaustive studies, will not use any other other plastic medium for document storage except Mylar®.

2. Mylar® provides resistance to aging, decomposition, penetration by oxygen, gases, acids, insects and other bad influences on your comics. That resistance exceeds 300 times that of the other poly's.

Certainly Mylar® is more expensive than other plastics. But with Mylites™, at slightly more than 10¢ each, they are only a fraction of the cost of new comics. With the benefit exceeding 300 times that of other plastics, the logic of using polyethylene, polypropylene or poly-etc. falls flat on its face.

It is something like either buying seatbelts made from Nylon for $10 or buying seatbelts made from paper for $2. The price difference and benefit ratio is similar to Mylar® versus the poly's.

I can't think of any issue of Comics Buyer's Guide that's brought home the frustration of so many fans with the current field as #1199 has. Oh, So? is almost completely filled with letters criticizing the current handling of classic characters by both Marvel (especially Captain America and the Fantastic Four) and DC (particularly Green Lantern and the Legion of Super-Heroes). As always, the fact that buyers continue to support such things plays an inevitable part — but the publishers, neglecting their older readers and traditional audience in favor of young readers increasingly captivated by TV and video games, and a speculators' market that, if it ever existed, is either dead or converted to genuinely rare Golden and Silver Age material, definitely bear their share of the blame.

The constant darkening of existing characters to "redefine them for the contemporary audience" is especially hazardous, given the reaction of many parents and conservative groups to current comic books.

Most parents who don't follow the current field, who constitute the great majority of adults, are unlikely to be familiar with Spawn or The Maxx and, if they have any sense at all, would realize that a comic book with a title like Verotika isn't exactly aimed at children. But many would remember Green Lantern or Captain America from their own childhood as harmless and morally positive titles, and if they leaf through an issue bought by their children (or even grandchildren) and see one hero denying American principles and another going on a murder spree, I couldn't truly blame them for being upset.

Mark Evanier's column about Marvel Zombies also underscores how easy it can be for extraneous factors like a comic book's publisher to affect a reader's enjoyment in not entirely rational ways. After all, does anyone automatically prefer books published by Simon & Schuster to those published by Random House? And, if some people genuinely prefer newspapers published by The New York Times Company to those published by the News Group, it's less a matter of quality than of politics. Politics may play a part in many fans' reaction to the market today (given the controversy surrounding such men as Ted Turner and Ronald Perelman, heads of the conglomerates that now own DC and Marvel respectively), but ultimately it was specific styles that created Marvel Zombies. Or DC Dinosaurs.

For there were fans dedicated as much to DC as Mark's friend Kevin and many others were to Marvel — not nearly as many, for the reasons Mark enumerates, but they existed. I was one of them. For one reason or another, whether impatience with what they considered overlong fight scenes, from being turned off by Stan Lee's style, or simply through a distaste for continued stories (a factor varying directly with Marvel's often-erratic distribution in a given area, which could cause a previously devoted fan to miss the final chapter of a serial — one fan noted that Marvel enjoyed far less popularity in the United Kingdom, where its distribution was especially poor), we simply preferred the DC style and writhed as much when our beloved Gil Kane and Neal Adams "wasted their time" at Marvel as did the Marvel Zombies when their beloved Steve Ditko and Jack Kirby "wasted their time" at DC.

Inevitably, those of us who didn't follow Kevin's lead and drop comics altogether ultimately realized that Jack Kirby was just as imaginative and powerful drawing the New Gods and even Jimmy Olsen as he was drawing The Fantastic Four and Thor, or that Neal Adams was just as innovative depicting The X-Men and The Avengers as he was depicting Batman and Deadman. With the business becoming increasingly competitive and a new generation of writers and artists much less inclined to spend their entire working life with one employer, a certain amount of cross-influence and melding of styles increasingly blurred the distinctions between the publishers.

Even so, it was frustrating to see our own childhood icons reinterpreted in ways DC had once disdained — to see the individual and heavily plotted stories that Gardner Fox and Edmond Hamilton had written so well give way to the looser, more open plotting and sometimes-overdone characterization that had turned us off about Marvel. I daresay Marvel fans felt the same way when DC's notorious tendencies to avoid true change and always return to the status quo began seeping into Marvel and when The X-Men came to have as many titles as DC's "top-heavy" Superman line had had in the '60s.

Oh, So?

And, most frustrating of all, no matter which Silver Age company one preferred, was the advent of the Image style, not only in its own titles but in those of Marvel and DC. Like Marvel in the 1960s (though arguably with less imagination and flair), Image is presenting the kids of its generation with new characters and styles they can consider their own, not the same ones their parents and grandparents followed. Just as Stan Lee seemed like a buddy to Marvel fans, no matter how obnoxious and conceited he might come across to DC fans, so Todd McFarlane and Rob Liefeld seem like buddies to Image fans, no matter how obnoxious and conceited they come across to Marvel and DC fans.

The article on Batman: The Long Halloween demonstrates how the field still retains many imaginative and well-crafted titles and that its variety isn't completely gone. Many thanks to Denny O'Neil for his decision to return Batman's adventures to the individual, well-plotted tales they've been for most of his 57 years, rather than the soap opera-style format pioneered by Marvel and inappropriately applied to far too many classic DC characters.

But it also suffers from lack of a closer examination of its ambitious premise: How could Batman's world change from that of a relatively realistic city (as seen in the earliest stories of the '30s and '40s) to one in which exotic "freak" criminals play an increasingly important part? The villains didn't really hit Gotham City all that quickly, and Loeb and Sale are pushing it by incorporating characters like the Calendar Man and Poison Ivy, who didn't appear until far later in Batman's career, into Bruce Wayne's first year as Batman. It's not as if there weren't other Batman villains who properly fit into that era that might have been used. (Sale and Loeb never mention Prof. Hugo Strange or The Cavalier or even The Penguin.)

With Batman and Robin scheduled to appear next summer, I suppose the inclusion of at least one of its characters was inevitable. At least they don't seem to be incorporating Bane or Mr. Freeze (or would it have been Mr. Zero? Now I'm confused), which would have done even more violence to what passes for Batman's continuity. But I'm surprised they didn't do the obvious thing by including Dick Grayson, who properly should have been in evidence by the time most of the villains appeared. I can understand that they might have preferred working with the solo Batman — a fascinating character who lasted for only a year of real time before Robin was brought in — but perhaps a good compromise might have been to introduce Dick after the murder of his parents by "Boss" Zucco (another character clearly part of the Gotham gang era) and feature him training through the rest of the series, not yet ready to begin his Robin career.

About a year and a half ago, I wrote a letter (which was published) to Oh, So? I'm a 46-year-old, 30+ year vet of comics collecting. And at the time of that letter, I formally quit buying new comics off the stands for the obvious reasons that have been stated in this column for the last few years. I still, however, have continued to buy CBG for the Golden/Silver Age back-issue collecting that I still do. That's why I feel the need to write this letter.

Two weeks ago, at a local convenience store, my 7-year-old son decided he wanted to buy a comic book. Prior to this, I chose his comics-reading material, limiting it to Power Rangers, Street Sharks, etc. This time, I decided to see what he would choose, and, to my surprise, it was one of my childhood favorites: The Flash. To make a long story short, that night, while I was at work (I'm a band director and have football games), my son asked my mother-in-law to read him his latest comic book. My mom-in-law read that Flash issue to my son and couldn't read everything as it was, due to the language.

The next morning, she showed me the comic book in question, and it's a sad state of affairs when a comic book or character that you grew up with and loved is no longer suitable for your own children.

In response, I went to the local comics shop in Clemson to see what was out, decent, and suitable for my child and still allow him the same opportunity to grow up with characters that his father enjoyed.

After the initial shock to my senses (artistically speaking) from the garbage that's being published, I made the following choices of what's top-notch in current comics for my son and me. Here they are, in no certain order: the various Star Trek titles, Untold Tales of Spider-Man, New Gods, Mister Miracle, Teen Titans, Supergirl, Wonder Woman, Power of Shazam!, Batman & Robin Adventures, and Superman Adventures.

While I was there, I also purchased the Final Night series and Parallax special — not bad.

The last word from me — read the aforementioned list of books for new material, and, collector fans, reread your collection. There's nothing like the best. For your kids, buy them old reading-condition comics from your youth. It's the only way to be sure you'll both have fun.

Phil Carpenter

As a disgruntled fan of today's comics, I suggest one thing to those who feel the same: Start reading cheap old comics.

If the stories are all that matter, then some great bargains can be found at local shows or comics shops. In fact, an average copy of an issue of Adventure Comics with a Legion of Super-Heroes story from the late '60s can cost as much as a new comic book, but the art is better and the story has much more to it than today's material.

Start looking in the back-issue bins and protest today's comics with your wallet.

Well, this was a lousy day. It started out OK, and in the mail I got the latest issue of Emma Davenport, something I'm always glad to get.

According to the letter inside, it's also the last one for the forseeable future, at least the last of the current series.

I don't know quite what to say. I'm actually speechless (Ask any of my friends and they'll back me up on what a feat that is).

It's lousy, it's not fair, and it sucks.

Will Elvira ever unload that darned house she bought? Not unless she can get it into shape, so she and her friends spend the day cleaning up, and every time she finds a mystical doodad, it reminds her of a story. Why does that remind us of what her book would be like if all she did is narrate stories? Find out in "Elvira's House of Misery," a multi-feature masterwork. The killer piggy bank? The monster under the bed? The zombie comics spec-ulators? It's all here, by our regular team of Frank Strom, Tom Simonton, and Louis Lachance, with additional work by Neil Vokes, James W. Fry III, and Art Viscardi.

Meanwhile, in back, Elvira pulls out all the stops to revive the stricken Creature-Feature. CPR never looked so good! Check out our Soulsearchers & Company crossover "Body and Soul, Part Four," by Richard Howell, Dave Cockrum, and Jim Mooney.

Oh, So?

In the letter, it is claimed that the comics industry is having the lowest sales in its history. I don't know if that's true but I'm certainly reading the fewest amount of titles in probably my whole 20 years of reading comics.

I used to read almost anything. I loved Spider-Man, X-Men, Superman, Legion, JLA, FF, and dozens of others. I quit most all of those in the last two years or so. I still love the Legion (One of the few bright sparks in comics), but I don't read any of those others any more. In fact, I started out reading Marvel comics and don't buy a single one this day. (OK, I did read a friend's copy of FF #1 and I must say I loved Pryde and Wisdom, but that's over now.) In the first time in my history of reading comics, I can count on one hand my favorite comics.

I never could do that before, which is sad.

It is sad that we have to lose a series like Emma Davenport and, even worse, that we have to lose it this way; it's senseless. I don't have much else to say and this wasn't much of a letter, but I just wanted to share this.

I think I'll go be depressed now.

Enclosed is a card dating CBG deliveries, as you requested four issues ago — thanks for your request. As you'll see, deliveries have been anything but regular, and I've been regularly feeling angry at my local PO, which I've held at fault. It's nice to know I wasn't alone, and the problem wasn't local.

In another now-long-past issue (#1189), you suggested mini-comics creators submit to your FPO column. Did nothing come? (Well, I know I submitted material.) I've always felt FPO to be a necessary, fitting column for CBG. Mini-comics creators have included Scott McCloud, Peter Laird, and Kevin Eastman, among others, as well as Matt Feazell and Tim Corrigan.

Thanks, too, for printing my lists of recommended small-press readings. I hope you're game for more:

Stray Bullets is simply the best, alongside Cerebus and Strangers in Paradise. Cerebus clearly has become an acquired taste, requiring patience and constant rereading. Rewarding in its often brilliant humor, its always brilliant dialects, recent Cerebus issues have included well-worked-in cameos from THB, Bacchus — from nearly a dozen small-press works in a dozen new issues. Issue to issue, it's sometimes tiring, lackadaisical, but reread in clumps several issues in a rapid row and given its 212-issue progress, it proves itself top-of-the-market. Any new issue is an excellent sampling.

Stray Bullets has so far produced about a dozen slice-of-life, self-contained stories, with occasional characters reappearing here and there and with the years of the setting jumping back and forth across decades. Every story is compelling, often shocking, always surprising, and somehow different from its predecessors. Murder and death by violence are its undercurrent, their social effect is its commentary, and love, natch, its plotline.

The 14 issues of Strangers in Paradise have given us one (relatively) straight narrative of the lives of two young women, a man friend, and the world around them, which includes women gangsters, stolen millions, AIDS, chauvinism, sexism, sex, poetry, and love. Sharp humor from a savvy lead character infuses every issue.

Suffice it to say, these comics are for grown-ups. They are each drawn with originality — and elegantly.

Mad Raccoons is silly, funny, outrageous, succinctly and enthusiastically drawn, enjoyable over and over again. A community of raccoons, each with a personality and a part to play — one with several personalities and several parts — reveals its life to us in short comics vignettes, poems, songs, and pictures. By Cathy Hill, MU Press, 5014-D Roosevelt Way NE, Seattle, WA 98105.

Reid Fleming, World's Toughest Milkman (should sell well on title alone) sports terrific characters in Reid and girlfriend/major movie star Lena, in a concept like Popeye's, except, as Popeye is honorable, Reid's rude. Reid'd whup Lobo one-handed and sneer. By David Boswell, in reprint, originally from Eclipse.

Journey is the incredible tall tale of Wolverine MacAlistaire, frontiersman in the forests of Michigan at the time of the War of 1812. The first issue is the most exhilarating chase scene in all of comics. MacAlistaire whipped up by a tornado is comicdom's best six or eight pages of weather. He outwits Iroquois, aids the Huron, reasons with Sasquatch, and is witness to a total eclipse of the sun. In a sparse, every-line-counts style, William Messner-Loebs packs history, tension, trail tips, and outrageous humor into an intelligent, literate, wild frontier. Back issues #1-27 are from Fantagraphics.

Usagi Yojimbo: Even before Sin City or Maxx, Usagi was independent and beautifully, stirringly done, a story of a medieval, anthropomorphic Japan of samurai and ninja. Usagi's outlasted two publishers, danced with Turtles, and reached an ever-wider audience on its strength of excellence and on-time performance and its great sense of fun. Now from Dark Horse.

Eddie Campbell's Bacchus owns a pub, fitting for the god of wine, plays host to a few other immortals and mortals, and celebrates his glory days and present days, with philosophic conversation and smart-aleck remarks in a thinking reader's comic book. The pace is lazy or, on occasion, frenetic, and the wit is sometimes very sharp: visual puns and asides, literary quotes, and mundane bar brawls. From Eddie Campbell Comics, P.O. Box 1282, Marietta, GA 30061.

Keyhole Comics' productions include Billy Dogma, As Big as Earth, and Keyhole #1, which packs 10 stories in 28 pages, very much in the tradition of American Spendor and heir to the mantle of Tales from the Heart, several written and drawn by a Splendor alum. Personal journal entries and observations that pack a punch in a variety of art styles by two accomplished writer-artists, Dean Haspiel and Josh Neufeld.

Haspiel's As Big as the Earth begins a story of a man whose every wish, conscious or subconscious, comes true, willy nilly. He's down; it's a curse and a half. The first issue ends with his acquiring a "friend" and "idea man": intriguing, well-thought-out, 10 digest-size pages for $1 from Keyhole Comics, 626 14th St. #11, New York, NY 10009.

Castle Waiting, a stand-alone story, apparently first of a series, is an heir to Shanower's Oz graphic novels and Vess' Ballads and Stories. A blend of fairy tales past and a new fairy tale of castle, royalty, witches, curses, an awakening kiss, it's almost a Unified Field of fairy tales: Snow White, Sleeping Beauty, a (reformed) Rumplestiltskin, intertwined. Nicely illustrated and told by Linda Medley, from Olio, P.O. Box 1012, Petaluma, CA 94953.

This is where comics is happening for me, along with the incredible Kurt Busiek's Astro City, Age of Heroes, Maxx, and Sin City. I hope readers enjoying any of these listed give the others a try.

James Vacca

When I was a child in the late 1950s in Jersey City, election day meant $10 in my pocket. All I had to do was stand sentry on Congress Street and what was then Hudson Boulevard and dash into the precinct voting area whenever I saw the police. Off on a side street, a brood of stocky, wool-coated men were flicking cigarette butts and encouraging voters with shots of whiskey as to their civic duty, simultaneously coercive and friendly. They got their way, and I got two fins.

A hundred years prior, a similar scene was enacted in Baltimore on election day. I don't know who the sentry was, but one of the unwitting citizens was Edgar Allen Poe. Traveling from Richmond en route to Philadelphia so as to accompany his mother-in-law, Maria Clemm, to his impending nuptials, Poe stopped in Baltimore to visit friends, even though the original Classics Illustrated reminds us that "Poe died alone and friendless."

Thus beganthe last chapter in the life of Edgar Allen Poe. Many authors have contributed their perspective, from Dr. Griswald to Dr. Benitez.

Without social or historical context, Dr. Benitez stated that Poe died of rabies. When one measure or a single experience is misused in drawing conclusions, we are in fact dealing with a form of fundamentalism — in this case, medical fundamentalism, where the experience of a doctor is considered normative. In doing so, we merely set one hoax upon another, replacing Poe's drunken stupor with rabies as causal in his death. Without the malice of a Rufus Griswald, Dr. Benitez must be added to the list of Poe's modern-day malefactors. Historical scholarship must be added to this medical diagnosis in order to render an accurate account.

"On the eve of an exciting municipal election," Harpers' September 1872 issue related, "Poe wanders up and down the streets of Baltimore when he was seized by the lawless agents of some political club and shut up all night in a cellar." From a different source, W.J. Widdleton, in his memoir and vindication of 1876, noted that a group of political harpies known as the Dead Rabbits drugged and dragged Poe through the open streets in a heavy storm to various voting booths, leaving him weak and exhausted on the streets of Baltimore. Being of a delicate constitution, this exposure could easily have proven fatal. "Cooping," as it was known, was common throughout urban America and was used to solidify the strength of competing political parties. A combination of personal and social ills contributed to the untimely death of this American genius. Few deaths are uni-causal; Poe's is no exception.

[Many, many deaths are "uni-causal" – especially in such cases as rabies or being hit by a truck – unless you want to go into such details as that virtually all deaths are ultimately caused by heart failure. The stories about Poe's being waylaid by a Baltimore political group are (as you note) of long standing.

What is unusual about Benitez' analysis is that it is the sole diagnosis made in more than a century that is based on information from the attending physicians and with no background information on the victim – and, therefore, based on no preconceptions. If, for example, he had been severely beaten, such a beating could have killed Poe. If he had been an asthmatic, sufficient exposure to allergens could have killed Poe. But what Benitez is saying is that the symptoms of what killed him were not those of a beating death nor of alcoholism nor of drug exposure – but were completely consistent with rabies.]

This is my first letter to you, after many engrossing hours of reading (and many happy years of subscribing to) your publication. I feel I now have 2¢ worth, and I'd like to throw it in as a response to Brian Clopper's letter in #1194.

What makes a good comics store? It used to be that the more cluttered, dark, and out-of-the-way a place was, the more charming (and frequented) it was, at least by the hard-core "real" aficionado. Witness recent columns of Mark Evanier's, where he recounts tales of book buying and cruising the many "comics" stores of his youth. But now, clutter seems to bespeak an attitude of "I don't know what I'm really trying to do here" on the part of the proprietor, as well as "I don't really care for you as the customer, anyway." This has been my overall impression of late.

So what do I look for in a decent comics shop? Well, I have to use the example of where I mainly do my business, Magnum Comics in the Bronx, New York City. (Hi, Neil!) The Big Two are right up front, as you enter the store, in alphabetical order by title. The next, albeit smaller, series of racks have an assortment of current independent titles.

What makes a store like this interesting is everything else you spy as you look around the store. There is everything from a well-stocked back-issues section (this is mandatory for me, too, in a good comics store); key (Silver Age) issues encased on the wall; and boxes upon boxes of sports and non-sports cards. A smattering of toys, costumes, statues and other esoterica round out the bill.

Proprietor Neil Shatzoff always knows what he's got and remains up on many of the titles – from The Preacher to The Sandman to his personal passion, Batman. In fact, it is because of Neil and his passion that I've been able these past three years to reacquaint myself and to come to a renewed appreciation for Batman.

In short: a large neighborhood store with a wide assortment of comics and comics-related material, a knowledgeable staff, and an overall sense that, no matter what I seek out to read, I will at the very least be humored. Mall stores don't do it for me – never have. They're small, catering only to the (perceived) general hot-ticket items (which are usually overpriced, to boot). Sure, they've got to be small, because most mall comics stores cannot accommodate the margin necessary to even make the overhead necessitated by a big retail store. But there's just no atmosphere to most of those places, and I fear most mall shoppers treat a comic-book store like the Scotch-Tape Specialty Store in those old Saturday Night Live sketches.

By the way, is it just me, or is it now the rule that, if you opened your store after the death of Superman, you are now probably out of business?

I hope there are more than just a few exceptions to this rule – but not here in the New York metropolitan area.

I would like to see the following items on a future Christmas list:

❄ A trade paperback of all of Jack Kirby's Jimmy Olsen stories. (The King deserves to be reprinted.)

❄ A trade paperback of Mark Gruenwald's Squadron Supreme mini-series.

❄ A fund-raiser comic book (similar to the two Heroes for Hunger titles done by Marvel and DC) for Christopher Reeve's recovery.

❄ A trade paperback of the excellent Young Master series by Chuck Dixon, Val Mayerik, and Larry Hama.

A fan can dream about such projects, right?

Pierce Askegren

A friend showed me Brent Frankenhoff's review in CBG #1199 of Doom's Day, Book One: Rampage, the Spider-Man/Hulk team-up novel from Byron Preiss Multimedia Company. As someone who has worked on that series and on some other Preiss Marvel-related projects, I thank him for the attention and kind words. I had only one quibble: I can state from personal knowledge that Eric Fein and Danny Fingeroth contributed equally to the book, so referring exclusively to Fingeroth in the body of the review gives Fein somewhat short shrift.

Brent raised a few questions I can answer, perhaps even in excessive detail. This Spider-Man team-up series consists of three books, which is why it's billed as a trilogy on the back cover of Rampage. The second book, Sabotage, will guest Iron Man and will appear in April 1997; it's by Askegren (me!) and Fingeroth. The third, concluding volume is Wreckage; it will see print later in 1997 and includes The Fantastic Four as written by Fein and Askegren. There is a "teaser" chapter of sorts at the end of the second book, but not quite what Brent had in mind. Wreckage wraps up the series, but I believe that more team-up books (by other writers) are in development. I'll be writing a Fantastic Four novel of my own for publication sometime in 1998.

Thanks again for the attention. It's nice seeing projects like this getting some coverage.

First World Productions

Dec. 14 and 15 First World Productions will put on the 1996 Las Vegas Comic Con and World Fiction Festival at The Sands Expo and Convention Center in Las Vegas. Show hours are Saturday 1 to 8 p.m. and Sunday 10 to.6 p.m.

The combination trade show and consumer event is located across the main strip from The Mirage, Caesars Palace, and Treasure Island in one of the biggest sites for trade show events each year.

The show, which includes a toy and model arena and erotic con in addition to the comic con, has expanded to cover more than 80,000 square feet. More than 8000 people are expected to attend.

The comics and art exhibition features fantasy and gallery art around the world. Original art will be on display with animation cels on Saturday and Sunday prior to the comic and art auction.there are also scheduled to be exhibitors from the European and Australian markets.

This year organizers have added an "erotic con" area which features companies like Carnal Comics and many others who will have adult film celebrities showing off their wares, signing autographs, and appearing daily. This portion of the show features such guests as Jasmine St. Clair, Tiffany Mynx, Sarah-Jane Hamilton, Brittany O'Connell, Anna Malle, Jezebel Flair, and Mary Jane.

Playboy Playmates will also be on hand. Playmates scheduled to attend include Rebecca Fenati, Cathy St. George, Monique Noel, and Petra Verkak.

The "erotic con" was originally designed to keep the adult material out of the comic con area.

It grew so large that a separate area was designed which connected to the Comic Con as an extension, allowing only attendees over 18 to enter.

Organizers are working on a party project with MTV and the Playmates for a gambling casino party, where winners will have a chance to get the choice of their favorite Playmate for a weekend date.

A number of news media are scheduled to cover the show. These include New York Banner, Chicago Limited, and Good Morning America.

Scheduled comics guests include Jim Lee, J. Scott Campbell, Scott Clark, Marc Silvestri, Bill Tucci , Rob Liefeld, Glenn Danzig, Al Simmons, Dave Stevens, and Ricky Rocket (lead singer of Poison).

Dealers scheduled to attend include Four Color Comics, Metropolis Collectibles, Vincent's Collectibles, Big Apple Comics, Moore Creations, Troma Pictures, Showcase New England, and New England Comics.

A Science-Fiction Cinema featuring an ongoing series of programs — from lost episodes to sneak previews of upcoming films — is yet another facet of the show.

The science-fiction guest list includes the executive producer of Star Trek, Herb Solow; Yvonne Ferns, the author of Last Conversation with Gene Roddenberry; Van Williams, who starred as The Green Hornet; Bob May, who starred as The Robot on Lost in Space and will bring his costume; Gary Wolf, the author of Who Framed Roger Rabbit; Richard Hatch, who played Apollo on Battlestar Galactica, and James Hong. These guests and others will be in the autograph area which is open from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. each day.

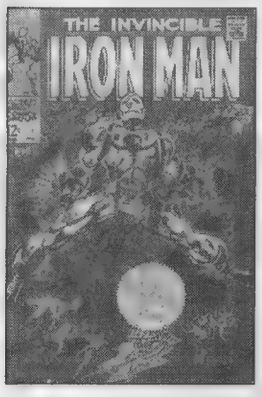
Command, they say, is a lonely vigil. Never having been in command of much of anything, myself included, I have to take their word for it.

Last San Diego con, I found myself sitting with four comic-book editors — past and present — who were discussing the strain of being in a hiring capacity, of having to say yes or no to people seeking work and then to do right by those to whom they said yes.

Portrait of the artist as a young editor.

All four admitted they had wrestled long and hard with the responsibility. All four admitted they'd sometimes erred along the way. At some point, striving to do the right thing, they'd either done the wrong thing or a right thing that someone had insisted on interpreting as a wrong thing.

One of these editors recounted, "This artist came to me with a project. It was something about which he was really passionate — characters that came right from the heart. I loved it and I wanted to do it. I fought for it, and the company agreed, and I think they really tried to do a good job from their end. But some of the printing didn't come out the way anyone had wanted, and the sales weren't up to anyone's expectations. The artist got hysterical over the printing and acted like we'd deliberately tried to sabotage his work. And then the disappointing sales he blamed on us, saying we'd promoted other, inferior projects at the expense of his. Then there was a dispute over some contractual rights. It was a simple misunderstanding, but the artist chose to view it as us sinisterly trying to screw him over.



Writer Archie Goodwin was on hand when Shellhead got his own title in 1968.

Archie wrote this short-lived 1975 series with the help of editor Larry Lieber and artists Steve Ditko and Wally Wood.

"It was the most frustrating situation of my career. I honestly think we did our best — at least, I did my best — but the artist still sneers at me when we pass at conventions and still tells people that I'm pond scum and that I tried to destroy his wonderful project and to cheat him on the money. And there's no way he will ever believe otherwise."

Three points to make about the above anecdote:

1. The editor quoted is a nice, honest fellow whom I believe to have good taste and good intentions and only the best of ethics. There is no question that he tried to do right. I also don't doubt that he remains genuinely disturbed at the results and at the interpretation put on his motives.

2. These things happen. I've seen them happen. No matter how good one's intentions may be, no matter how sound one's ethics and discerning one's judgment, one cannot inhabit a position of power and/or responsibility for very long without having someone becoming convinced you've planted a stiletto deep within his or her spine. It simply, absolutely, positively cannot be done.

3. There is one exception to point #2, and that exception is Archie Goodwin.

I thought it was about time someone in the comic-book business (as I am, at times barely) told the outside world what everyone in the industry has known for some time. We have a number of class-act good guys about, but the reigning world champ is Archie Goodwin.

Archie has been an editor and a writer for many years. He has edited and written some very fine comics, a few of which I'll mention before we are through here.

But I want to make clear topside that, while I admire his writing and editing and wish I'd had my name on stuff that was that good, my greatest envy of Archie is of his reputation. Throughout comics, he is totally respected as a man of integrity, wisdom, and talent. The few folks I've ever heard speak ill of him were so nakedly jealous of his regard that they didn't fool anyone, certainly not themselves.

If you think I'm exaggerating here, then go to a comic-book convention, find a group of writers or artists, and tell them that Archie Goodwin lied to you, cheated you, mistreated you, ruined your work, or otherwise abused you. No matter how good an actor you are, no one will believe you. No one. You might as well try claiming that Mother Teresa had kicked you in the privates and lifted your wallet.

To have held as much power in the industry as Archie has, and to not have one credible soul out there who thinks he abused it, is an achievement of which I am in awe.

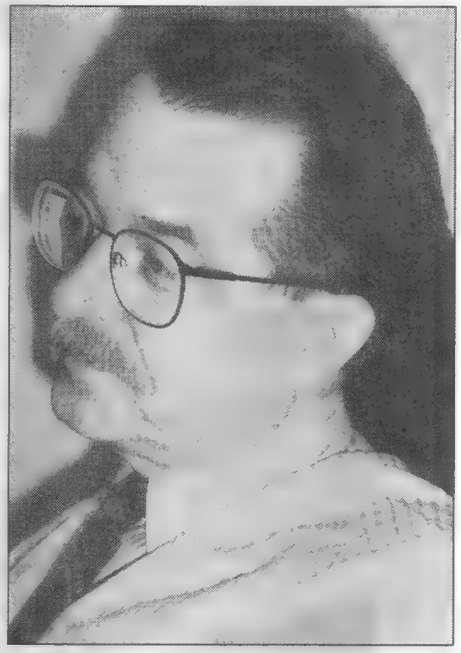
Archie Goodwin was born in Kansas City, Mo., on September 8, 1937, grew up in Tulsa, Okla., and eventually migrated to New York, where he attended the School of Visual Arts. There he became chummy with several fine comics artists, including Al Williamson, Gray Morrow, and Angelo Torres. Soon after, he sold a script to a Harvey comic book called Alarming Tales and so slipped quietly into the comic-book business at a time when that just was not done. The field was in recession, companies and comics were going under, and most people were getting out, not in.

He was a longtime fan: His early work proved he'd read a lot of EC comics, among others. But there were few jobs, even for him, so he only dabbled in comics now and again, making his living from other kinds of magazines, including Redbook and Fishing World, and assisting Leonard Starr with the On Stage newspaper strip. (He has worked on a number of newspaper strips over the years, not always with credit.)



Then, in 1964, the first issue of Warren Publishing's Creepy made its debut — a black-and-white horror comics magazine in a world of four-color super-hero titles and a successor-in-interest to Tales from the Crypt and its ilk. Warren even employed as many of the mainstay EC artists as would work for it, including Wood, Williamson, Torres, Crandall, Orlando, and Severin — along with many who more than met the standard: Ditko, Colan, Toth, Morrow, Grandenetti, and Adams, among others. If the EC titles were the greatest horror comics ever done, the early Warrens — Creepy and its subsequent companion, Eerie — were worthy runners-up, at least while Goodwin was at their helm.

Archie was not the editor of Creepy from the start; a gentleman named Russ Jones held that honor. But, when Jones departed after a few issues, Goodwin — already the magazine's most prolific writer — slipped naturally behind the desk.

Somewhere, in some box here, I have a Ditto fanzine of the 1960s wherein a connoisseur of funny books makes note of the fine writing in the magazine, wondering aloud what seasoned pro was hiding behind the obvious pseudonym, "Archie Goodwin." That, you see, is the name of Nero Wolfe's sidekick in the fine series of detective novels by Rex Stout, so more than a few fans took our guy for a nom de plume. In time, they'd cease making that mistake, as the real person continued to write almost everything for Warren's titles and to attract the best artists available. It was truly a staggering array of illustrators, and, when he left after three years, almost all of them left with him.

No one who was reading Warrens at the time will ever forget that shocking moment when the first post-Goodwin issues of Creepy and Eerie hit the racks. Never has a magazine fallen so far, so fast. One guy in our old comics club bought a Creepy without opening it, without noticing that the cover was by neither Frank Frazetta nor Gray Morrow, who did the bulk of them in Archie's day. The kid wandered to the bus stop, opened his purchase, and discovered that the insides of his horror comic book were truly horrifying, though not in the way one might like. He sprinted back to the newsdealer, trying to demand a refund.

Later, Warren's magazines rebuilt their creative foundation somewhat, finding new talent and getting back some of the old, including cameo appearances by Archie. But at the time, the change was jarring, and I remember thinking that this Goodwin person must be some guy, if almost every great artist had followed him out the door. Years later, Al Williamson told me, "We all loved working with Archie. We all trusted Archie. The money wasn't good, but we worked for Warren because we wanted to work with Archie. When he left, there was no reason to stay." (Al has since made a habit of working with Archie whenever possible, including the Secret Agent Corrigan newspaper strip for years, then the Star Wars comic book and strip.)

Goodwin surfaced at Marvel. Then he went to DC. Then he went back to Marvel. Then he went back to DC — and I may be omitting one back-and-forth here; one loses count. He admitted to me once that, when he arrived at a San Diego Convention, he had to remind himself which table to go sit behind.

These were not the wanderings of a guy who couldn't hold a job for long. Rather, everyone wanted to hire Archie, and where he chose to work was a matter of which outfit he felt would treat him better and allow him to do the kind of work — both creatively and ethically — he wished to do.

I'm sure he got offers from other houses, as well. At least once that I know of, a company had attained a reputation for mistreating talent and sought to better its standing by hiring Archie Goodwin. The publishers didn't consider changing their policies or terminating the folks who were screwing over writers and artists; they just decided to try to buy themselves some integrity by saying, "Look! We've got Archie Goodwin!" That was all they thought it would take, and they were probably correct, though Archie chose not to work there.

My favorite Archie Goodwin work as a writer is still probably those issues of Creepy and Eerie. Everything in them was grand — even a series of adaptations of classic horror stories which were, to suit the conventions of horror comics, fitted with new "shock" endings. Archie is probably the only scripter who has worked in funny books who could re-plot Edgar Allan Poe without having the purists come after him with pitchforks. I also liked the short-lived Blazing Combat, which mirrored the tradition of the EC war comics, as Creepy had echoed its horror comic books.

I also admire his work on a great many ongoing super-hero and adventure titles. Most notably, he did a long, superb stint writing Iron Man and took occasional forays into the worlds of Batman, Star Wars, The Haunted Tank, The Hulk, and a few others. (Only a few of us remember a short-lived comic book he did for a short-lived company of the 1970s called Atlas Comics. It was called The Destructor and it deserved a much longer life.)

Perhaps his most acclaimed work in super-heroes so far has been a short-lived DC strip with the oft-recycled handle of Manhunter, which showcased the fine work of the then-new Walt Simonson. Great stuff — but I have even more respect for the adaptations by the same team of the movies Close Encounters of the Third Kind and Alien. If you haven't seen them, you've missed two of the best transfers of movie-to-comics-page ever achieved.

And Archie continues to write — not as often as we might like, but, when he does, it's always a treat. Check out a couple of recent shorts in the Batman Black-and-White comic book. (He also draws, too — and quite well, at that. Last week here, I called for a reprint volume of Wally Wood's great self-published magazine, Witzend. Well, the first thing that oughta be included is "Sinner," a brilliant little story, written and drawn by A.G., that graced its first issue.)

It's a splendid body of work, and, as I said, I'm envious of it and even more envious of Archie's standing among his peers. People just like to work with him. They trust him, both creatively and business-wise, and they all seem to think their trust is well-invested.

This ability (if one can call it that) has served him well in the many years he's been an editor at DC and Marvel. The two most important things an editor does, apart from taking freelancers to eat on his expense account, are (a) attracting and positioning the proper talent and (b) setting the proper environment in which they can do their best work. In his recent work as a group editor for DC and immediately before that as editor of Marvel's Epic line, Archie has been terrific at (a) and even better at (b).

Being skilled at (b) often means standing out of the spotlight and leading the applause for those who write and draw your comics. I'm sure Archie has had to rush in on some projects and perform artificial respiration, but he has never broadcast this fact, never — like some lesser editors — tried to grab all the credit that was grabbable. This is because he's good and because, deep below several layers of genuine humility, he must know it. This week, I wanted you to know it.

This has gotten gushy, I know, but Archie Goodwin has set a fine standard for professional conduct in our field. This goes along with his high standard of writing and editing on comics like Creepy and Eerie and Vampirella and Manhunter and Detective Comics and Star Wars and Legends of the Dark Knight and Iron Man and Secret Agent Corrigan and Groo and —

Wait one minute.

What is Groo doing on this list? Hold on. I have to check something —

I'm back. I just checked and found out that, sure enough, Archie Goodwin was, for a time, the editor of Groo.

This changes everything.

Forget everything I just said, people. The man is slime.

Next week in this spot: Mark does Manhattan — which means more of those Broadway show reviews that you all love so much. No, don't thank him. Just send gifts to Mark Evanier, 363 S. Fairfax Ave., #303, Los Angeles, CA 90036.

The influences of ROSWELL

"Given that Roswell takes place in the '40s, I feel that it's very important to take the reader back in time to that era."
— Bill Morrison

Once upon a time in New York City, a little restaurant in Greenwich Village flourished. It was a small, badly lit place that had a pleasantly pungent smell about it which, although difficult to place, was strangely familiar. The restaurant's name was Raji Rani. It served Indian and Mexican cuisine on a dark part of 9th Avenue, and many people thought it was one of the most blessed places on this planet. For scores of customers, it satisfied a strange craving that they hadn't even been previously aware of. The restaurant was unique: where else could you find lamb vindaloo and bean and cheese burritos on the same menu?

Bill Morrison has never been to that restaurant — in fact, he may be troubled by the idea of the place, his tastes leaning more towards the Hometown Buffet. But his Bongo comic book, Roswell: Little Green Man, has a great deal in common with the fabled Raji Rani. Where the restaurant took foods of distant lands and put them on the same table, Morrison takes the products of his disparate influences and puts them on the same comics page: Throughout Roswell, various styles of different eras and ideas sit alongside each other like chicken tandoori and green corn tamales.

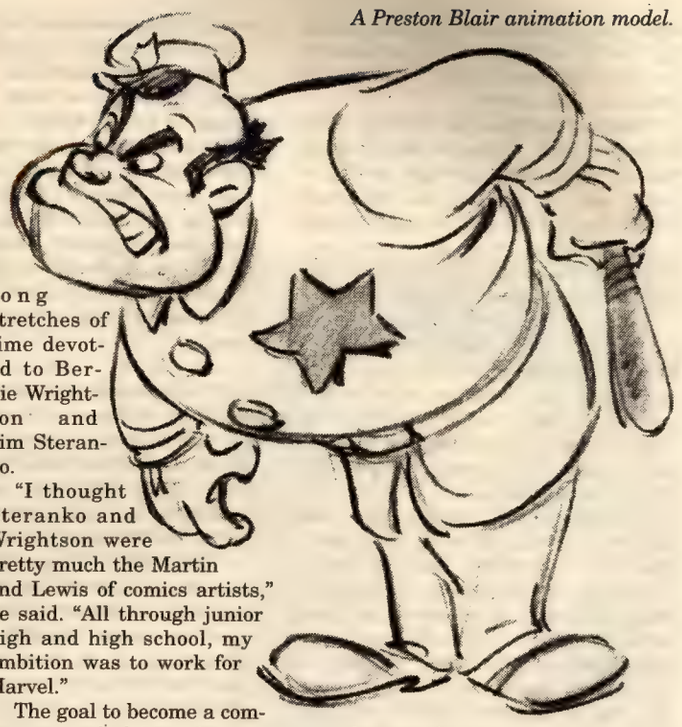
Alex Schomburg is one of Morrison's influences.

A page filled with Wally Woodesque science-fictional electronics is populated by characters who hearken back to Bill Elder and Will Eisner. An alien that looks as if it could have driven off the box of a Big Daddy Roth model kit zips through Kirby-inspired spacescapes. Roswell: Little Green Man is absolutely, without a doubt the creation of a hard-core, longtime comics lover.

It started in the early '60s. As a child, Morrison was a voracious comics reader, swallowing all the DCs, Archies, Harveys, and Gold Keys in his path, along with generous helpings of Segar's Popeye and Al Capp's Li'l Abner. (Alas, he didn't have access to Marvel until his adolescence.) The reading eventually led to drawing. Morrison said, "I used to draw the Justice League all time. I got a little older and, eventually, a little better at drawing. By that time, Neal Adams was very popular; sometimes I would trace his drawings just to see how he did it.

"Soon, I kind of graduated to imitating his style instead of tracing. And then I would discover another artist and repeat the process."

As a teen-ager, Morrison went on to study many other artists' styles in a similar fashion, with long stretches of time devoted to Bernie Wrightson and Jim Steranko.



A Preston Blair animation model.

"I thought Steranko and Wrightson were pretty much the Martin and Lewis of comics artists," he said. "All through junior high and high school, my ambition was to work for Marvel."

The goal to become a comics artist led Morrison to art school. Art school led him in a different direction. "I discovered different types of illustration; I kinda got turned on by the airbrush and the kind of art that was being produced by West Coast illustrators."

It was at the Center for Creative Studies in Detroit that Morrison was exposed to the comics world beyond super-heroes. "The '70s were a real explosive time as far as what I was being introduced to, artwise. And that was where I discovered Crumb, the Hildebrandt brothers, Frazetta — When you go to art school, you're suddenly not the only artist on campus. In junior high and high school, there were maybe two or three other people like me who knew their way around a pencil, and then, when you're in art school, everybody can draw and they've got their own influences. You're suddenly introduced to a lot of artists you've never even heard of. It's a mindblowing thing. I wound up spending a lot of money trying to collect the work of these 'new' artists."

So, collections were purchased. Original art was sought. And along the long way from art school to art director/editor of Bongo Comics, Bill Morrison has filled his California home to what he described as the near-breaking point with thousands of comics, posters, art pieces, and memorabilia, much to the consternation of his long-suffering wife, Kayre.

And the library has had a strong impact on Morrison. "When I'm writing or drawing, I'll either notice or have it pointed out to me that 'this drawing is very Al Capp' or 'that line is something you could have read in an old Popeye strip,' but I'm not always conscious of it. My wife, just the other day, was looking at a drawing I did of Julienne [brilliant diner waitress and Roswell's best friend] and she said, 'Boy, is that ever right out of Li'l Abner.' I was actually flattered because it wasn't a swipe, I didn't look at an Al Capp drawing and copy it, it's just that the influence and my love for those drawings just came out."

Morrison said he does want to give Roswell a certain historical reference through the art style. "If you look at something that's supposed to happen in the past done in a very '90s style, it only goes halfway in taking the reader back in time. But I think if you have something that's evocative of the period in which it's supposed to have taken place in terms of art and style, then it really does go a long way toward getting the reader into that frame of mind. And I think that's what I've attempted to do with Roswell, in sort of summoning up my influences, be they Jack Cole or Dan DeCarlo or Lou Fine or whoever," Morrison said. "Given that Roswell takes place in the '40s, I feel that it's very important to take the reader back in time to that era. I see a lot of period comic books that don't do that: They're drawn in a very '90s style; the artists don't pay attention to details; sometimes you'll see cars that don't look like '40s cars or guns that don't look like anything they had back in World War II."

Despite Morrison's desire to "take the reader back to the post-war era," he does throw in other, more contemporary touches. "The Pootians [a bumbling, evil alien race that opposes Roswell's people] are a good example of something in the series that's not from the '40s or '50s — they're drawn in more of a '60s style. I was trying to make the Pootians both monstrous and comical. I happened to be flipping through a book that had a lot of Big Daddy Roth drawings in it. I was definitely inspired by his crazy style — particularly in the eyes and the teeth.

"And the slobber — especially the slobber." Morrison added that it is quite possible that readers will see other styles in the series as the story progresses. "Time travel will be a big part of Roswell, and in stories where they might travel to the '60s, I may inject sort of an R. Crumb feeling. Maybe in a '70s story I'll throw in some Neal Adams or Jim Steranko.

"The reason I'm doing this comic book is that I love comics — super-hero, humor, science-fiction, romance, cowboy, you name it. And the creators of all the stories I've loved have made a deep impression upon me. Roswell is the product of all this — it crams everything I've ever gotten out of reading comics into this story about an alien stranded in America during the 1940s. The fantastic nature of the story combined with the characters allows me to explore all of these genres and styles.

"I can remember reading somewhere that Michael Stipe said something to the effect that REM didn't owe anything to The Beatles. I couldn't believe he said that. Even if he wasn't a Beatles fan, he had to be inspired by somebody else who was. As comic-book creators, we are all in debt to those who've gone before us, and that needs to be acknowledged. I know I owe something to all of these artists and others like Preston Blair, Bob Oksner, and Alex Schomburg. I know that I'm basically the sum of my influences — I really don't think I would be anywhere without them."

• I read lots of stuff and recommend some of it, both in this column and elsewhere. I find myself unsure of whether I've reviewed Supreme before now — but I sure don't want to miss pointing the title out to anyone.

Starting with #41 (Aug 96, Image, $2.50) and continuing through #42 (Sep 96, Image) and #43 (Oct 96, Maximum), writer Alan Moore has put together an incredible project: He has begun to tell a terrific super-hero story which combines revisionism of super-hero storytelling with an affection for earlier days of that art form that should simultaneously entertain new readers and push the buttons of long-time fans.

If you're one of the fans who has complained that all there is left for them is collecting back issues, because today's comics don't have what used to make comics fun: Try Supreme.

I'm afraid my copies of these issues are going to get pretty beat up, as I show them to people around here. In #41, for example, a three-part (complete in one issue) story enters the Supreme's mind, as he finds himself with memory gaps and uncertain powers — and discovers he is a new version. ("He looks like a nineties model. His powers may be so poorly defined as to be virtually limitless!" comments Superion, an earlier version of himself.) Moreover, he finds a "Valhalla for Supremes who'd been displaced in the unfathomable periodic changes in space-time we call revisions!"

While penciller Joe Bennett and inker Norm Rapmund handle the primary story, each issue also offers special segments, complete in themselves. Other artists — so far, Keith Giffen, Al Gordon, Rick Veitch, and Dan Jurgens — have played with other parts of the Supreme story. In #42 (above), he visits Littlehaven, home of Kid Supreme, and recalls his first meeting with the League of Infinity, "youths from many ages, banded together to fight crime across time!"

In #43, the story opens with a dark, gritty scene — which turns out to be the comic-book story written by Supreme's alter ego. ("I'm still not sure that resurrecting Omniman as a Hezbollah extremist really works...") Each issue of Supreme stands on its own, has something to say, and is not to be missed. Whether you prefer comics of today or comics of Silver Age vintage, pick up an issue of this gem.

• Speaking of gems, have you been reading Superman Adventures? The first issue was written by Paul Dini; the regular writer now (#3, Jan 97, DC, $1.75) is Scott McCloud (pencils by Rick Burchett, inks by Terry Austin — and, hey, colors are by Marie Severin!).

The third issue features Braniac and the end of Krypton and is packed with excitement and emotion — and thoughts about the respective values of life and information. Are you readers really longing for the type of super-heroes you used to love? Then this is a good week for you.

• Speaking of which, Leave It to Chance #2 by James Robinson and Paul Smith (Oct 96, Homage, $2.50) is out. You are getting this series, aren't you? This story is not complete in one issue, so you'll want to track down a copy of #1, as well — but don't put off buying #2. Chance comes across sewer goblins (goblin babies kept as pets got too big, so people flushed them into the sewers) — and joins a policewoman and an investigative reporter to solve the problems. We're not talking super-heroes here; it's a terrific modern fantasy. And speaking of terrific modern fantasies reminds me of Coventry, but I'm out of room this week, so stay tuned.

Before I go, though, I've got to say: Anyone who has given up on current comics is going to be missing some tremendous storytelling.

[Editor's Note: Items for this feature, which lists appearances in comics stores and lecture halls — not conventions — of writers, artists, and editors should be submitted as far in advance as possible*. We need your information* at least two weeks in advance of the signing to have a sporting chance of getting it in.

The notices must be written — we cannot take these by telephone — and kept brief, preferably in the format used here. Send to Now Appearing*, c/o* Comics Buyer's Guide*, 700 E. State St., Iola, Wis. 54990 or fax it (again c/o* CBG*) to (715) 445-4087.*

Friendly Frank's

BUYING & SELLING ENTIRE STORES, BETTER COMICS & ART • CONSULTING • EST 1978

Super Grab Bag ➲ $60

A full long white box of good to mint condition hero comics, plus 2 $19.95 Trade PBs No more than 3 of an issue. 100s sold with no TPBs, at same price!

Add enough for shipping (extra refunded).

➲ It's been eight months since I concluded liquidations of Friendly Frank's Comics and Friendly Frank's Distribution. At that time there were a few more buyers than I had deals for. Around the same time, some of our former retailers asked for help liquidating their businesses. I purchased our customers' store stocks, and sold them to my unsatisfied buyers. As a result of this demand for quality lots at low prices, I decided to hold onto the old FFD warehouse and actively search for bulk deals. I started a new company with the catchy name of Friendly Frank's*, which would primarily sell more expensive comics and art, but which would also buy and sell in bulk when the right deals come along. This is Friendly Franks' first bulk ad.*

ADVANCED INVENTORY

$100,000 to $125,000 retail value ➲ $10,000!

A better inventory than 95% of established comic stores!

➲ Including:

- Over 30,000 comics All in alpha-numerical order
- 450+ 10¢ Cover Price!
- 75+ Trade PBs.
- 150+ Graphic Novels
- 100+ Magazines

➲ This Advanced Inventory consists of the combined front-room stocks of two comics stores which closed three years ago. Composed from literally 1000s of individual collections (and more than 10 years of backstocking new comics) this selection offers something for everyone

➲ All 120 long white boxes of books are bagged and most are boarded. Though most prices have gone up in the last three years I'd suggest leaving the majority of the prices the same–when you're buying at 10% of Guide you can afford it.

➲ Maximum Selection, Minimum Price.

As the two store inventories were being combined into one, quantities over six copies of any single issue were liquidated. One of the beauties of this assortment is low avarage number of copies–about two–in relation to the relatively low number of books/price. Besides giving maximum selection for minimum price (and in a minimum amount of space) it also makes it easier to get your money back fast, to expand your trading opportunities, and to bring customers from a distance.

➲ Value Added...

Each store held a half-price sale before they went out of business, and some of the hotter books from three years ago are gone. To improve the balance, I've added three boxes of hotter selling titles (mostly X-titles & Spawn) There were also only comics–I've added two boxes of Graphic Novels, a box of Trade Paperbacks, a box of better mags, and some miscellaneous items

➲ Just to alphabetize this lot, figuring time at $7/hour, would cost over $3000. Add in the cost of boxes, bags and boards, and the time it takes to do that work, and that figure approaches your total cost.

➲ A great stock for a store, convention, mail order–or best of all–all three!

The below is intended to give an idea of the breadth of this offering. It is far from a complete list.

➲ Highlights include: *Action 306, 329, 333, 335, 337, 344, 352, 354 Adventure 297, 370 Amazing Spider-Man 47-50, 52-53, 65, 78, 102, 148 Aquaman 11-12, 14, 20-21, 23, 25, 28-30, 35-6, 39, 41-42, 44, 49, 53-60 Ast. BASIC INVENTORY

Over $35,000 retail value ➲ $5,000!

Part #1: Base Inventory ➲ Retail value over $20,000.

➲ This deal was originally designed for a collector/investor who realized investing in new issues was not in his best financial interest. Each of the three components address a different area of interest to create a well balanced investment.

➲ This first section has very little duplication, which is good from the point of view of a collector–just the books he was personally interested in were worth more than the total price of the package. I decided that at some point any investor will probably try to sell some comics. At that point it will be important to have more of the better selling items–to maximize sales, and (perhaps most importantly) to educate youself on the market. You will never get a good feel for what's selling if you only have one of each.

➲ 17 long white boxes in alpha-numerical order. Originally used as a backup convention stock (when we did two conventions in one day). Last used in 1991, so most items are at least 5 years old. Some prices have been updated, but I'd recommend raising a few more. I've blown out the seven slowest selling boxes of merchandise from this collection, added one box of X-titles, and another of more recent, better-selling titles like Barb Wire and Bone. The only duplication is on hot titles like X-Men and Spawn

➲ Over 5400 comics. With less than 200 duplicates, this would make a great "instant collection", or a good inventory for a store that wants maximum selection for minimum investment.

➲ Highlights include: *Action 353,356,358,363,367-368,371-372, 374,393,400-1,408, 412 Adventure 266, 365,403 Amazing Adventures 2,5,7,10, Aquaman 31 Ast. Part #2: Backup Inventory ➲ Retail value over $7,000.

This assortment is designed to complement the first. It supplies more copies of the better selling merchandise. There are 50 copies each of Maxx 2 and Spawn 12. These are books that I'm overstocked on, and whenever I get a chance to get rid of some I do. But they are also good selling books. When you have a deal that is deadlocked–don't come down on the price–instead offer to throw in a few of each. Or carry a few along to a show and trade even with someone who is overstocked on Maxx 3, Spawn 16, or something else you need This section gives you a chance to learn the market and the business without giving up your last copy, and to diversify your inventory without spending cash. 90% of the Backup Inventory consists of titles tha: outsell 90% of the other titles from their time period.

The reviews are in! Hake's Guide is a hit!

"IT'S AS IF A GAUNTLET HAS BEEN THROWN DOWN. HOW CAN ANYONE WHO DOESN'T GET THIS BOOK HOPE TO BE A SERIOUS PLAYER IN COMICS AND COLLECTIBLES?"

JERRY ROBINSON
ARTIST, CREATOR OF ROBIN & THE JOKER
NEW YORK

"This book brings together just about everything one could want to know about toy premium collecting, including a great history and introduction to the field."

Don Phelps
Collector
Massachusetts

"This is the price guide that will define what all price guides should be."

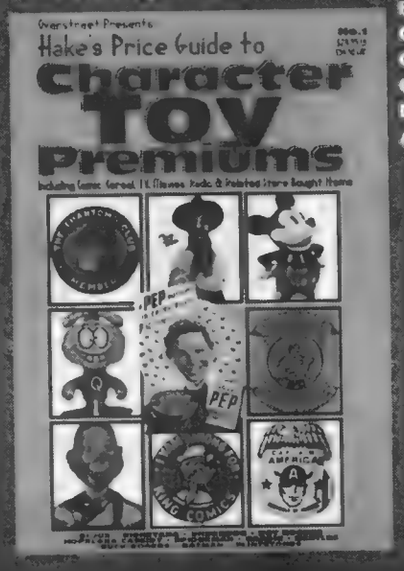
Scott Rona
Comic Book Retailer
Florida

"Hake's Price Guide is more than just a price guide. It's the best history and reference book on collecting comic characters ever done!"

Harry Matetsky
Collector
New York

"I can't get over the quality and production values of this book. It is an amazing piece of work. I've never seen anything like it. This book helps me deal with all the historic information. The pricing is just a minor part. It makes me a genius."

Bill Campbell
Comic Character Dealer
Alabama



"There is no other tool for collectors like Ted Hake's new book. There is no competition for this book. None. Period. This book will do for toys what the Overstreet Comic Book Price Guide did for comics."

Keif Fromm
Historian/ Collector
New Jersey

"To call Hake's Price Guide 'amazing' would be like calling Action Comics #1, my favorite book, 'fairly collectible.' This book blows away any price guide I've ever seen."

Dave Anderson
Collector
Virginia

"Well researched, well thought out, and expertly presented. Hake's Price Guide to Character Toy Premiums is packed with more great stuff than most collectors could dream of."

Peter Merolo
Art Collector
Arizona

"Ted Hake's new book is practically a road map to the hidden gold mine that is character toy premiums. X no longer marks the spot. Hake's Price Guide does!"

Rob Hall
Collector
Pennsylvania

"This book will be the one collectors remember as starting something big!"

Bill Grandey
Publisher
Oregon

"What more could a serious fan or collector ask for? It's all in this book!"

Chey Reynolds
Writer
Texas

"People who don't buy this book will be roundly and rightly ridiculed by neighbors, friends, and co-workers. They will be driven before us in the streets like the ignorant collectors they are. Get your torches and pitchforks and round 'em up!"

Steve ison
Collector
Indiana

"When recognized experts testify to the quality and accuracy of a reference work, its credibility is firmly established. Hake's Price Guide has been endorsed by some of the most illustrious names in the comics industry, proving that this fine volume has earned its place as the definitive source on the vast world of toy premium collectibles."

The return of just-plain Valentino

'A Touch of Silver' returns Image co-founder to his one-word-name roots

"A Touch of Silver is not about nostalgia... It is, instead, about the love we do invest in these things."
— Jim Valentino

By Carol Denbow

Jim Valentino has had a solid career as a comics artist and writer. He is best known for his work on super-hero comics ranging from Marvel's Guardians of the Galaxy in the early 1990s to the recent relaunch of Marvel's Avengers. As one of the founding members of Image Comics, his studio, Shadowline, produced his own Shadowhawk series among others. Before his super-hero work he wrote and drew his satirical parody of hero comics, normalman. Yet even before normalman Jim Valentino was producing autobiographical comics under his own imprint and using only his last name. Renegade Press produced three issues collecting these works in the late 1980s, and Valentino reprinted these stories last year in the trade paperback Vignettes.

Now Valentino has taken a step back to his roots with his new series, A Touch of Silver, which will be produced by Image Comics. A Touch of Silver is a different kind of comic book from what many of his newer readers may be used to. This ongoing series is the story of Timmy, a 10-year-old kid who is stuck in an unhappy dysfunctional family. It's a very honest comic book where the kids talk like kids and realities are not always starkly black-and-white. Set in the early 1960s, the series employs many comic-book and literary devices to communicate Timmy's experiences and feelings to his readers. Far from being a nostalgia title, A Touch of Silver is a story of a less-than-perfect world as viewed through the eyes of a young boy.

CBG: A Touch of Silver has a distinctive autobiographical feel to it. How much of it is based on your own experiences?*

Valentino: More than I'd care to admit (laughs). Hopefully, there are bits everyone can relate to. Most of the themes I've employed in my work have been about alienation or disenfranchisement. I think that's what this series, in particular, is all about. It's for all of us who didn't live in a Norman Rockwell painting — who were never the most popular kid in school — who sought solace through our fantasy life.

CBG: Can you give us a general rundown on A Touch of Silver's story, characters, etc.?*

Valentino: The series will be bimonthly and, uniquely, set in real time. For example, the first issue's story, "Birthday," takes place in October 1962. This will be noted in parenthesis under the title. The second issue, "Dance," takes place in December 1962 and so on.

Timmy, the main character, is 10 years old and in the fourth grade. There's also: his parents, both of whom are angry and abusive, their marriage obviously disintegrating; his younger sister, Jody, who taunts and teases him endlessly; and his "best friend," Mike, whose mother disapproves of Tim. Then there's his next door neighbor, Debbie, with whom he has a very special, very mutually nourishing friendship.

Essentially, he, like most 10-year-olds, is stuck in a powerless situation. His life is dysfunctional; his only escape are his books, his drawings, and, most especially, his comics. The story is seen solely through Timmy's eyes; there's no narration and the different drawing styles used throughout clue us in on his emotional interpretation of the people and events he encounters.

CBG: What audience are you aiming A Touch of Silver at?*

Valentino: On one level I'm truly doing this book as a cathartic exercise, so it's for an audience of one. I'm hoping, as all artists must, to communicate with other people, to share a commonality. I'm hoping this will be the more mature comics fan — the one who loved old super-hero comics but who now enjoys a story from the heart like Strangers in Paradise or Love & Rockets. I'm concerned about how women will react to it.

CBG: Since this isn't the average action comic book, what do you hope readers will derive from A Touch of Silver?*

Valentino: All of my work, on one level or another, is very emotional. I'm an emotional guy. What can I say? I want to elicit an emotional response, whether it's to make you laugh or make you cry, excite or anger you. There were many readers, particularly those of us who never gave up on our fantasies and who continue to love comics. We have similar feelings and experiences. I'm looking to make a connection and, to me, that means affecting you on an emotional level.

CBG: This is certainly not the first time that an artist has used comics within the context of a comic-book story, but it is a good use of them. Why did you decide to do this?*

Valentino: It was a fundamental part of my personal experience and, hopefully, a bridge to the reader. You can substitute movies for the comics, or TV, toys, books, whatever. You can substitute the comics of whichever era you grew up in. The key is that it is only in his fantasy world that Timmy finds true solace.

CBG: He significantly does not overly identify with them by living in them. They liberate him by giving him something to aspire to.*

Valentino: Yes, exactly! They are representations of his dreams. And our dreams are the one thing that cannot be taken away from us!

CBG: Another device that you employed that works occurs when the parents are fighting or extremely angry: You drew them very cartoony. This technique suggests to the reader that this is not an exact portrait of life, but of life as viewed through the eyes of a child.*

Valentino: I was very uncertain about that at first, but yes. That was the intention.

CBG: Another thing the title touches on is the magic comics have for us as kids. Unlike possessions like toys or games, they are experiences. And, as one treasures a special moment from one's life, comics like these mentioned in A Touch of Silver had a charm about them that they gave us not only a sense of superiority, but the feeling that we too, could be heroic and victorious.*

Valentino: Yes, exactly! I chose this era because it's the one I grew up in. Those comics were where my emotions and memories are. You may substitute for them the ones that mean something to you. The book is not about nostalgia, although it may elicit that in some readers. It is, instead, about the love we do invest in these things.

CBG: By setting the story in this period and using period comics, are you attempting to make any kind of a statement about today's comics?

Valentino: Not consciously, no. I think there are a lot of great comics out there today and I'm very tolerant of the idea that each generation chooses its own heroes. That's the way it's supposed to be.

CBG: Why did you choose now to do A Touch of Silver*?*

Valentino: I'd been moving in this direction for quite some time. I remember a couple of years ago when I finished normalman / Megaton Man and I told Larry Marder that it was the first time I really enjoyed doing a comic book in years. He replied, "Of course. It's a Valentino, not a Jim Valentino book." What he meant was it was a return to my roots as opposed to my trying to be commercial. Last year, as I released the Vignettes trade paperback, collecting all of my earlier autobiographical works, I worked on A Touch of Silver and I knew I had to do it — for me, if for no one else.

CBG: The Image partners have recently added more non-super-hero comics titles to their rosters. Erik Larsen picked up Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles and A Distant Soil, Jim Lee started Homage Comics, and now you are releasing A Touch of Silver*. What about this new direction?*

Valentino: I believe that this move is a natural part of our growth as a viable, long-term entity in the business. It's been five years now. The industry has changed radically in that time and, I believe, so has Image. I would remind everyone, however, that this change is not inconsistent with Image's history, although they didn't move too far afield in the business.

It's been five years now. The industry has changed radically in that time and, I believe, so have Groo, Bone, normalman, Boof, Maggie the Cat, Astro City, etc. All of these are not what one normally associated as an "Image" title. I believe this trend will continue as Image matures and I know of several more non-genre comics that are in the pipeline or on the way. And I, for one, couldn't be more pleased.

CBG: What are your plans for 1997?

Valentino: I'll be going to Chicago and San Diego to promote A Touch of Silver. I'll be doing a special Image crossover comic book later on, but it's too soon to talk about it. I'm actually a lot more optimistic about 1997 than I have any right to be. I guess after all my years of being an unapologetic pessimist, it's about time!

CBG: Any other comments you would like to make?

Valentino: I'd really like anyone who's reading this to rethink their opinions — not just about Image, but about the entire industry. There are a lot of very excellent comic books coming out right now. Comic books from every company that are worthy of our attention, our praise and our patronage. There are books that can and should be given to people who don't read comics. Our entire industry is in serious trouble, and it is up to each and every one of us who loves it to do all that's within our power to save it. It's time we stopped the in-fighting, the grousing, the complaining and start extolling the virtues of this wonderful art form.

End of sermon. Thanks for the soapbox.

Faraway LOOKS

John Jackson Miller
CBG Associate Editor

When Jim Valentino made the national news in 1995 with the Shadowhawk AIDS plotline, I took a call from an AP reporter who asked if real-life subjects were new to comic books. Eschewing the chance to do the usual five-cent-speech on the history of social relevance in comics, I said if he picked up a copy of Vignettes: The Autobiographical Comix of Valentino (1995, Eyescream Graphix, $6.95) he'd see reality and Valentino were old drinking buddies — though maybe not friends.

Those of us venerable enough to recall the 1980s remember the days when Valentino's first name was a well-kept secret and Val's creative output included of the satirical mini-series normalman and a trio of comics describing the real-life adventures of "Th' Kid," Valentino himself. Vignettes collects all the material from those three issues published by Renegade Press (Valentino #1, Valentino, Too!, and Valentino the 3rd) and adds a foreword by Dave Sim, commentary by Val, and a new story, "Breaking Up Is Hard To Do." Now, as then, the stories are a cut above the flood of autobiographical comics stories: alternately funny and depressing, but always well-told.

By the way, fans of this material who lamented Valentino's 1990s commitment to the super-hero genre, "Th' Kid" has a few things to say on that score in Vignettes as well.

If you can't find Vignettes, take heart; Valentino plans to reissue it in 1997 under the Image label.

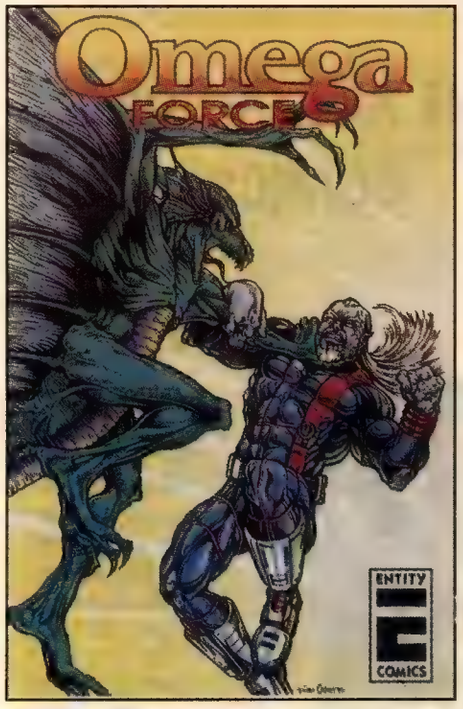
Publishers' Picks

What titles do publishers the new year's January

Retailer reactions to these recommendations follow in this issue.



A number of publishers were recently asked to choose, from the material they have scheduled to ship in January, which titles they felt would be most worthy of the attention of readers and collectors. Participating retailers were then asked to predict how popular each title will be and to grade each preview from A+ to F, according to how successful they found it as a work of art or entertainment.

Here are the publishers' picks and the reasons they gave for picking the titles:

Action Planet: Uncle Slam and Fire Dog #1

Rep: Michael Manley

Recommended because: Ande Parks' delusional hero and his canine sidekick leap into action from the pages of Action Planet Comics. Once our country's most beloved hero, Uncle Slam is now forced to live in hiding by a government that seeks to destroy him. In this solo debut, Uncle Slam and Fire Dog embark on a journey to find one of Slam's old crime-fighting partners. It's all delivered with a touch of parody by Parks and Phil Hester. In addition to the lead story, this issue features a bonus tale, "My Dream Date with Uncle Slam," by Bret Blevins. The 32-page black-and-white title is priced at $2.95.

Archie: Cheryl Blossom #1

Rep: Paul Castiglia

Recommended because: Ever since Archie brought Cheryl back (after a 10-year hiatus) in 1994's "Love Showdown" storyline, she has remained immensely popular. Now, two years after her comeback, with sales of her various specials and mini-series remaining strong, Archie has decided to allow Cheryl to graduate to her own ongoing series. Cheryl has a loyal fan base made up of people of all ages, including many adults who wouldn't normally pick up an Archie title but are drawn to this femme fatale's nefarious schemes. The creative team of writer Dan Parent and legendary Archie artist Dan DeCarlo is also a major draw. In the premiere issue, Cheryl and her brother, Jason, inherit an old country club from their eccentric aunt. To help make their grand opening a smashing success, the Blossoms invite the upper crust of Riverdale's high society, along with assorted actors, celebrities, and rock stars. Unbeknownst to Cheryl, Jason has also invited Archie and crew. The 32-page color title retails for $1.50.

Caliber Comics: Daemonstorm #1

Rep: Editor Tim Parsons.

Recommended because: Right away, you can tell Caliber is serious about this one. Why else would it have Todd McFarlane contribute his first non-Spawn-related art in years for the cover of Daemonstorm #1? Written by LegendLore writer Joe Martin and drawn by Don Hillsman, Daemonstorm is the tale of an all-consuming force of nature inadvertently given life by a space-traveling civilization. It becomes apparent that a lone soldier left on an abandoned outpost may be the only hope of continued existence for many universes. A saga on an epic scale told in color, Daemonstorm is a bookend series with four specials that take place in Caliber's Oz, Deadworld, The Realm, and Kilroy Is Here. Other artists involved in the Daemonstorm issues include: Brian Bolland, Jordan Raskin, David Boller, renowned fantasy artist Larry Elmore, Mike Wieringo, Richard Case, Danny Miki, Craig Brasfield, D'Israeli, and Art Wetherell. Each of the specials is a complete stand-alone story.

Dark Horse: Star Wars: A New Hope — The Special Edition

Rep: Lou Bank

Recommended because: While it's true that you can never go home again, if you found your home had been reconstructed to include a spa, an upgraded kitchen, and a guest house — well, would you really be complaining? When George Lucas made the first Stars Wars motion picture, a scene was shot wherein Han Solo met Jabba the Hutt. But, as any Star Wars fan knows, Jabba didn't appear until the third film, Return of the Jedi. Lucas had hit the technological wall: He couldn't craft Jabba the way he wanted, so he simply removed the scene. Now, two decades later, he has taken that footage — with a young Harrison Ford portraying a brash Han Solo — and added Jabba to it. The new adaptation of Star Wars: A New Hope offers similarly revitalized thrills. Crafted completely from scratch by Bruce Jones, Eduardo Barreto, and long-time Star Wars artist Al Williamson, this adaptation includes the new scenes from the Special Edition, so readers can experience the story again for the very first time.

This adaptation is being released simultaneously as a trade-paperback collection and as a monthly, four-issue comic-book series. The 104-page trade paperback will retail for $9.95. Each 32-page issue of the mini-series will be priced at $2.95.

DC: Heartland

Rep: Scott Nybakken

Recommended because: This unsettling tale of personal and political struggle set in war-torn Northern Ireland is by Preacher co-creators Garth Ennis and Steve Dillon and is inspired by events and characters from Hellblazer. Heartland finds Kathy "Kit" Ryan at a crossroads. Her relationship with John Constantine firmly behind her, Kit finds a homecoming and reunion with her brother and three sisters in ravaged, unforgiving Belfast revives long-supressed, violence-riddled childhood memories that force her to confront the re-emerging issue of her parents' loveless marriage and its crippling aftermath. Against a violent backdrop of hopelessness and rage, Kit struggles with the thoughtless hatred that threatens to tear apart both her country and her life.

Heartland showcases Ennis' talent for characterization and dialogue and Dillon's flair for rendering flesh-and-blood human beings in realistic settings — in short, all the strengths of the creative team that brought you Preacher but with an understated and disturbing aftertaste of its own. The 64-page Vertigo one-shot is priced at $4.95 and is not intended for children.

Entity Comics: Omega Force: Dark Secret #2

Rep: Editor-in-Chief Don Chin

Recommended because: Brothers Michael and Jonah Cagley (writer and artist, respectively) not only create Omega Force, they also work hard with comics stores to promote their title and the comic-book industry. The series takes a science-fiction approach to super-heroes. An ancient interstellar organization has prepared and trained the specially enhanced members of Omega Force for the coming Omega War with the armadas of Karad the Godslayer.

Fantagraphics Books: Maggie and Hopey Color Special

Rep: Eric Reynolds

Recommended because: This one-shot should delight every Love & Rockets fan who pined for the young couple's reconciliation through the last few years of Love & Rockets, only to enjoy the event all too briefly on the last page of the last issue. Furthermore, the stand-alone tale will provide an opportunity for new readers to find out what has made the Hernandez brothers such a major influence in the comics industry. Hopey's Vegas-bound pals, Joey and Janet, stop by Hopey's home and end up needing Maggie's help when their car breaks down. This is the first Love & Rockets comic book produced specifically for color. The 32-page title is priced at $3.50 and is not intended for children.

Slave Labor Graphics: Mister Blank #0

Rep: President Dan Vado

Recommended because: Film noir meets Winsor McCay in the primo issue of Mister Blank, the tales of one ordinary man battling the evils of the world with righteous fury. Little does nondescript Sam Smith know that a late-night encounter with terrorists will entangle him in a world of clones, air ships, time travel, and global domination. Released under SLG's Amaze Ink imprint, Mister Blank should appeal to fans of other Amaze Ink titles, as well as such diverse titles as Bone and Big Guy and Rusty the Robot.

SpiderBaby Grafix & Publications: S.R. Bissette's SpiderBaby Comix #2

Rep: Publisher Stephen R. Bissette

Recommended because: SpiderBaby Comix #2 features some of the most unusual and provocative stories to flow from the brush of self-publisher Stephen Bissette. A corporate executive is rudely awakened in his own bed after midnight to find an angry band of women have already "had their way" with him in "Cottonmouth." "Sleeper" lingers in the dreamless limbo of an undead abandoned child. The new pastor of the local parish blesses a decidedly odd holiday meal before "Saying Grace," an eerie interlude literally drawn from Bissette's own nightmares. Finally, Bissette conceived and completed "A Life in Black and White" in 24 hours, answering a challenge issued by Understanding Comics creator Scott McCloud. Priced at $3.95, the 48-page, black-and-white title is not intended for children or even squeamish adults.

"Daemonstorm is the most ambitious project that Caliber has attempted."

"In the remarkably wholesome world of Riverdale, there's something wonderfully refreshing in the absolutely selfish and egotistical antics of Cheryl Blossom."

• Heartland is a readers' comic book. At first perusal, it appears to be made up of an inordinate number of talking-head shots — but, oh, what those talking heads have to say! Garth Ennis is the man behind the words, while Steve Dillon supplies the pictures. The result is a powerful, moving, disturbing series that spins off from the pages of Hellblazer — but reads more like Preacher. This is the way mature comics should be done. Rather than fill the book with ultra-violence and nudity, Ennis and Dillon have packed it with mature themes, thought-provoking situations, and complex characters.

• Daemonstorm is the most ambitious project that Caliber has attempted; more than just a crossover, this is a powerful science-fiction story that happens to involve four different Caliber titles in addition to a pair of bookend volumes. Since most of Caliber's comics are creator-owned and are not set in the same universe, the fact that it's even attempting such a big project is laudable.

To help ensure that fans don't miss the project, Caliber has also brought in some pretty big names to supply art and covers for the series, including Todd McFarlane, Brian Bolland, Jordan Raskin, Richard Case, Danny Miki, D'Israeli, Larry Elmore, and Mike Wieringo. From what I saw of the first issue, I'm eager to find out how the other creators handle the story.

• Steve Bissette's SpiderBaby Comix is most definitely intended for mature readers. Bissette is aiming to shock in some of these tales and is certainly trying to instill fear and loathing in his readership.

The stories don't always work — sometimes they just seem outrageous for the sake of being outrageous — but I admire Bissette for trying to present more than standard comics horror in these pages. The first issue, which came out a month ago, featured a delightful pre-Tyrant tale that Bissette did almost a decade and a half ago.

Magnus* #1

S. A. Bennett for DarkStar Books & Comics, 237 Xenia Ave., Yellow Springs, OH 45387

• Established as a "break-out" character on the strength of just two stories in the outstanding anthology series Action Planet Comics (it's probably not too late to find copies of #1 and #2, and #3 just came out), Ande Parks' delusional and disfigured patriotic super-hero, Uncle Slam (and his robotic Dalmatian pal, Fire Dog) now has his own title — and I couldn't be happier. Uncle Slam is a super-heroic Don Quixote, fighting for the American dream in the face of the political conspiracy that threatens to destroy him. What's remarkable is Parks manages to bring a light-hearted sense of fun to stories that are a rich blend of action-adventure and quirky humor, and Uncle Slam is never ridiculed or demeaned for believing in what's good in America. Wow. Another well-done, fun comic book; what's the business coming to?

• Heartland: In a field full of blown deadlines and inexplicable delays for highly anticipated projects, Garth Ennis and Steve Dillon have been quietly shouldering a remarkable workload, producing page after page of graphic, horrific, and, ultimately, deeply affecting work. This year alone they've produced Preacher, Preacher Special: The Story of You Know Who, and now Heartland. Longtime fans of their run on Hellblazer (such as me) will recognize the main character of Kit Ryan as John Constantine's ex-girlfriend, but you don't need to know any background information to be swept away into a story of family secrets among the "troubles" of Northern Ireland. A sharp departure from the degrading sex and visceral, violent "gags" of Preacher (which I like just fine), it's the effective use of the smallest of everyday details that takes the reader into a very real world of "ordinary" human horror. Definitely something to show your friends who don't read comic books.

• SpiderBaby Comix is a horror comic book. Some believe there are plenty of them around, but a distressing number are just tangentially connected atrocities performed by undead girls in bikinis for the gratification of a "merciless generation" of readers who're all alienated and stuff. Boo-freakin'-hoo. You want a horror comic book, you read SpiderBaby Comix, created by Stephen R. Bissette, creator of Tyrant. Ruthless stories of graphic violence and disturbing horror, told in Bissette's uniquely grotesque and unsettling style. Get it — but bring some wetnaps; it gets messy inside.

• Maggie and Hopey Color Special: Only a handful of pages were presented for review — as though it matters. Maggie and Hopey — together again, in the first-ever Love & Rockets comic book done for color. Could this possibly be bad? Actually, it was a genuine treat to see some of Jaime Hernandez' uninked pencils, where you can clearly see, through the subtle nuance of body language, characters moving and acting "in character." I can't wait to read the whole thing.

• As pointed out by the late Don Thompson, the comic-book adaptation of a movie doesn't make much sense in the modern world of video. And another adaptation of Star Wars seems, on the surface, pointless, even if it does incorporate the new material found in the "Special Edition" of the film. But Bruce Jones, Eduardo Barreto, and Al Williamson have done a phenomenal job of capturing the magic of the movie on paper — I just wish Marvel could have published this when the movie first came out. This is something that Star Wars fans will definitely want — and there seems to be more of them all the time. Hey, Dark Horse, George Lucas: Is there any chance of us seeing an English translation of the manga adaptation?

• Cheryl Blossom #1: In the remarkably wholesome world of Riverdale, there's something wonderfully refreshing in the absolutely selfish and egotistical antics of Cheryl Blossom — and now she's finally got her own series. Once again, I was sent a incomplete photocopy and two-thirds of the art was uninked, so I had to "tolerate" looking at the sharp, clear pencils of Dan DeCarlo, one of North America's finest cartoonists (more people should see his work this way; it's a sharp reminder of just how good he is). And congratulations to writer Dan Parent — maybe I missed something, but I believe this is the first time a pregnant woman (pop star "Medusa" — guess who) has ever appeared in an Archie comic book, and she gives birth, too! Wow!

And might I also suggest: The Furies, an absolutely solid, well-thought-out triple threat (story-art-ink) from creator Bill Knapp's Carbon-Based Comics. It's about an all-female super-hero team and neatly manages to sidestep all the clichés and stereotypes of the genre by depicting them as, well, people. Bill Knapp has a clear, clean line that brings his characters to life and he clearly knows how to tell a story. The Furies #4 should be available now. Take a chance and give it a look.

READ TEMPLATE YET?

"TEMPLATE, through finely judged pacing, effective rendering and some terrific dialogue, is superbly told. The dialogue flows very smoothly and it seems every line of art adds to the drama or to a character. In any case, TEMPLATE, is very dramatic comics. There's also no shortage of humor, all of which works well."
-SIMON BAKER (THE COMICS REVIEWER)

Iron Tarantula
NUMBER 1
Color, Devlin Janax/William Marden/
Joe Kazarsky/Steve Addlesee.
Brandon Savage hasn't had a great life. Orphaned at 13, his hands are mangled at 19 and replaced with cyber-claws he invented to help amputees. But Brandon didn't know what real trouble was until he finds himself hailed as a new superhero, the Iron Tarantula, after he used the claws and a mysterious "N" suit which can negate gravity to battle murderous mercenaries. Trouble is, Brandon doesn't think of himself as a superhero, doesn't want to be one, and has no idea how to be one. A true superhero for the ambivalent '90s. Talent search pencilers inkers and letters wanted for Centaur City project. Send name to:

"Fans of these characters in Love and Rockets will want Maggie and Hopey Color Special immediately."

"With a literate script, effective pencils, and beautiful inking, Dark Horse make a good case for buying A New Hope."

Still over a month to go, and already 1996 is shaping up as one of those may-you-live-in-interesting-times years.

What about 1997? Judging by the preview copies for January comic books, publishers are working unusually hard to promote their titles right now. It doesn't take that many sales in today's market to make the difference between a "hot" comic book and a canceled one.

• For example, let's start with Stephen R. Bissette's SpiderBaby Comix #2, an ongoing reprint collection of his horror comics and other stories from the last 20 years or so. Many of these stories show influences of underground comix of the late '60s and early '70s, especially the EC-inspired titles with twist endings and lovingly detailed gore. To promote this, Bissette has sent: an ashcan of the first issue and more than 10 pages of text pieces, PR, and other information. This is all very nice, and, at $3.95 for 48 oversize pages, the comic book isn't a bad deal, but it's a reprint volume, after all, and one of adult material at that, so it's not as though All about Books and Comics will be ordering more than a few copies of it. Was it worth all the promotion Bissette put into it? Hey, if it sells just an extra copy or two to each store, it'll make a profit, and he can keep putting these out for another year — I suspect that, in 1997, that will be considered a victory. Grade: B-.

• Not to be outdone, Action Planet is promoting its pick for January, Uncle Slam and Fire Dog #1, with copies of two back issues of Action Planet (with the first appearances of the characters), some glossy postcard-sized cover reproductions, three pages of background on the characters and creators, and three pages of art.

Who is Uncle Slam? Imagine if the '40s Captain America had been a robot, programmed for patriotism and idealism, but that, by the '50s, the government had considered him an embarrassment and blown him up. "Alive," damaged in both body and programming, he's been hiding since then, but now his country needs him. Oh, and Fire Dog is his cute robot Dalmatian sidekick, playing Penny to his Inspector Gadget (i.e., it's the brains of the team).

This has some interesting concepts and promising art and story. The "evil government" plot could get old, and the title walks a tightrope between parody and actually caring about its characters, but it's worth a look. Check back issues of Action Planet to see if this is worth ordering from your retailer. Grade: B.

• DC, in 1996, outpaced all the other publishers in its effective promotion of its titles — not by spending a lot of money on hype, but by simply sending out lots of preview copies of the comic books it thought were good. All about Books and Comics receives a thick packet every month, and we put them out for customers to read. Almost every time, requests for the comic books increase, and we end up ordering more of them. (Gosh, what a coincidence, huh?) The Vertigo titles, especially, benefit from this, because they often tell good stories that would otherwise get lost in the flood of other comic books.

S.R. Bissette's Spider Baby Comix

For January, the Vertigo pick is Heartland #1. This one-shot is by Garth Ennis and Steve Dillon of Preacher fame, but it's not supernatural and not over-the-top satire. Instead, it's a quiet (well, quiet for Ennis) family morality play set in Northern Ireland, with dead-on dialogue and characterization. The heroine, Kit Ryan, first appeared in the Ennis-Dillon Hellblazer and was so popular as a strong, but refreshingly normal, counterpart to the book's general craziness that an entire issue was devoted to her. Now, this special continues her story, and it's definitely worth following. Grade: A.

• Speaking of old, well-crafted characters with stories worth following, we have Maggie and Hopey Color Special #1 by Jaime Hernandez. Fans of these characters in Love and Rockets will want this immediately, and, because it's a self-contained story, attractive, and accessible to new readers, it may pick up some new fans for Hernandez, too. Love and Rockets had reached a point where it probably had to stop, but, while it lasted, it was an essential comic book, mature and simple in its storytelling but complicated and authentic in its view of human nature; it made comics a better place. Maggie and Hopey is a good reminder of that. Grade: A.

• One sure-fire sales boost for a comic book is a strong tie-in with other media — look at 1996's Superman-Lois wedding issue. Dark Horse Comics has had the rights to the Star Wars comics for a while now, and, as the date of the new movie approaches, they should continue to be strong sellers. For January, Dark Horse is offering Star Wars: A New Hope — The Special Edition, a sort of director's-cut comics version of the first movie, with a new adaptation (including a few scenes that were in the original script but not filmed) by Bruce Jones, pencils by Eduardo Barreto, and inks by Al Williamson. Does the world really need another retelling of this story? With a literate script, effective pencils, and beautiful inking, Dark Horse make a good case for buying it. Grade: B+.

• Slave Labor Graphics' Amaze Ink imprint offers comics suitable for grownups that you don't have to hide from the kids. Mr. Blank #0, its January offering, is a good addition to this line. Its press release calls it "film noir meets Winsor McCay," but it's more like Die Hard meets The Spirit in the way it takes a story of an ordinary guy thrust into extraordinary circumstances and combines it with lots of clever sound effects and camera angles and a nice eye for page layout. It's worth a try. Grade: B.

• Daemonstorm #1 is about an expanding, sentient cloud of demonic influence (insert your choice of Rush Limbaugh or Ted Kennedy joke here), and it's Caliber Comics' attempt at a standard industry sales ploy: the single-company crossover epic. It's offering the standard crossover disclaimer — you don't need the crossover issues to read the rest of the story — and it has the Obligatory Big-Name Guest Cover Artist for the first issue: Todd McFarlane. Caliber sent separate copies of the script and some of the art; both were serviceable, although the script was able to keep my attention better than the art alone did. Number of actual pieces of art McFarlane provided: one. Number of times his full name is mentioned in the first page of the press release: three. Overall grade for the book: C.

• Entity Comics occupies about the same marketshare as Caliber and has a similar problem in finding enough of a core audience to support its comic books. Omega Force II #2 is a good example. It's been delayed until January, although the first issue came out quite a while ago (presumably, the delay is at least partly related to a lack of advance orders). This isn't a bad comic book — it's a fairly well-told space opera — but it has a large cast of characters and there isn't anything about the art or story that stands out enough to scream, "Buy me!" When you're a small publisher and you're offering a 23-page black-and-white comic book for $2.75, that makes it hard to build a following. Grade: C.

• Cheryl Blossom #1, Archie's January pick, is the first issue of a new ongoing title featuring the character who out-Veronicas Veronica by being the kind of rich-and-beautiful but spoiled-and-sneaky girl that Ronnie started out as but has since outgrown. At $1.50, this is the usual entertaining 15 minutes of reading, and there's nothing wrong with that; Archie survived a lot of industry downturns since the 1940s by virtue of its clear storytelling and focus on a broad readership base. Grade: B.

• Acclaim Comics has come in just under the deadline wire, sending a preview copy of Magnus #1 on the very day that I'm typing these reviews. (In fact, if I miss my deadline, I'm blaming it.) This is a rare case where the preview copy might have hurt — I've liked the Acclaim relaunch titles so far and was prepared to like this one, too — but after actually reading the issue, I'm left cold. The previous, Jim Shooter-scripted Magnus was all about struggling to do the right thing; Magnus' instinctive nobility pitted him against any odds and any authority — his society, his allies, or his own upbringing — that kept him from finding out what that right thing was and carrying it out. The new Magnus, by contrast, just isn't very likable and doesn't appear to think much at all. Maybe this will be the point of the series — the rising and advancing of his spirit, as Shang-Chi used to say — but, if so, I hope the little creep gets started on it soon. Good art and story here; it just didn't appeal to me that much. Grade: B-.

Dear Comic Book Enthusiast,
Welcome to our first comic book auction. All the comics in this auction are offered for sale for the first time since they were acquired by me from various Pennsylvania estates & general antiques dealers who found them in estates around PA over the last 12 years. While this is our first comic book auction we are not new to the mail & phone bid auction arena as we have had 34 auctions, both by mail & by phone, of early baseball Tobacco Cards, antique toys, antique occupational shaving mugs & lunch boxes in the last 6 years
I hope you find something you like in our listing. These comics are listed in alphabetical order. Look closely. There are some treasures here! Good luck!
Jim Maxwell

RULES:

1. CLOSING: Bidding closes at 8 P.M. Friday, December 20, 1996 on all lots on which the bid is $20.00 or under. On lots on which the bid is $21.00 or more, the auction will continue by phone and fax after 8 P.M. until 15 minutes goes by without a call. After 8 P.M. bidding will be restricted to those bidders who have bid prior to 8 P.M. on Dec. 20 on any lot.
2. PHONE BIDS: You may call as many times as you want prior to and on the closing days of the auction to check the status of the high bids on any items you are interested in. When you call, we will tell you the current high bid & whether or not you are holding the high bid. You may then choose to raise the bid a minimum of 10% over current high bid or pass & not raise the bid. All bids will be rounded off to the next highest dollar. No partial dollar bids will be accepted. We will accept calls from 10 A.M. Eastern Standard Time & onward through the night on the closing day of auction. On the closing night the phone lines will be open until a period of 15 minutes passes without a call. The phones are working & in good order, so please keep trying to get through.
3. Please bid by mail, fax or phone in even dollar amounts. Any partial dollar bids will be rounded to the next highest dollar. We reserve the right to refuse any bid(s) for any reason.
4. MAIL BIDS: Please try to send mail bids at least one week prior to closing to ensure arrival. Bidding by fax is, of course, immediate, but be sure to verify receipt of fax to avoid disappointment. Earliest bid wins tie. Please print your name, address, & phone number clearly on your bid sheet.
   You may bid on as many comics as you like & limit your total purchases to any dollar amount you desire but this amount must be clearly specified on your bid sheet. Otherwise you are obligated to pay for all comics on which your bids were successful.
5. CONDITION REPORTS: All questions regarding condition must be asked prior to December 19.
   Grading is according to the guidelines of Overstreet Comic Book Grading Guide.
6. It is our intention to sell every comic so we are listing them all at a starting bid of $1.00. Every comic which has a bid of $1.00 or more will be sold.
7. RETURNS must be verified by phone & returned in the same condition as received, fully insured & postmarked within 3 days of receipt to qualify for a refund. Returns will not be accepted on comics graded below Very Good and/or selling for $20.00 or less each nor on items on which bidders have paid their bills later than 2 weeks after the closing date of the auction.
8. PA residents must pay 6% sales tax or provide a valid resale number.
9. Postage, packing, & insurance will be billed at $4.00 minimum per order plus $1.00 per $100.00 over first $100.00 total of purchase. Immediate shipment on receipt of certified check or money order. Personal checks are ok but allow 10 days to 2 weeks to clear prior to shipment.
10. The placing of bids in this auction will constitute acceptance of the terms listed in 1 through 10. If you cannot accept these rules, please do not bid. Thank you!

Carol Denbow

"If you have missed Ben Edlund's The Tick in the last few years, check out Uncle Slam — same sort of goofy fun, but with a twist all its own."

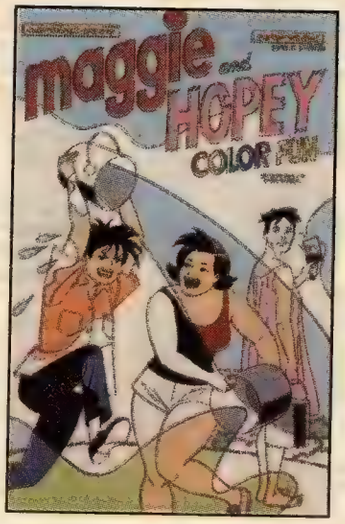
• Like the original EC horror comics, Steve Bissette's SpiderBaby Comix is a unique experience. This is a collection of short comics stories done by Bissette at various times in his career. All are mature horror stories — absolutely for adults only — and not for the squeamish. I am not a great fan of graphic horror comics, but Bissette's art and layout are so good that I found myself attracted and reading along even as I was repulsed. In good horror, there is a psychological hook as well as an element of disbelief in the extremity of the situation which is evoked in the reader and compels him or her to read on. Bissette is, of course, a great fan of horror in both comics and prose media, and his love of the genre comes to graphic life in these comics. I recommend them for all horror fans. Available from Bissette's imprint, SpiderBaby Graphix. A+

• I think that it is safe to say that Jaime and Gilbert Hernandez' Love & Rockets is a landmark comics series. Throughout its more-than-11-year history, Los Bros brought true human experience to the comics medium with a depth of feeling that had rarely been achieved. Now, Jaime has written a new story featuring his two wonderful gals, Maggie and Hopey, in Maggie and Hopey Color Special from Fantagraphics. In it, Hopey has settled outside of Los Angeles and is visited by two friends who are in need of a mechanic. This is an excellent little one-shot, a nice stand-alone addition to one's L&R library. Jaime Hernandez is still, in my opinion, one of the best comics creators in the field today, and here is a great place to introduce yourself to his work, if you haven't already done so. A+

• DC Comics' Vertigo imprint



gives us another cool Garth Ennis-Steve Dillon title. Heartland is a one-shot inspired by characters from Hellblazer, the story of Kathy "Kit" Ryan who has put her relationship with John Constantine behind her and now must focus on getting on with her life. To do that, she must come to terms with her past, which is filled with anger, hopelessness, and rage. The reunion with Kit's siblings is set against the turmoil of Belfast, which echoes the fury and torment of Kit's own feelings. This is a sensitive story that deals with very human feelings and emotions. One of the most powerful things about the Hellblazer series is the way in which the writers have depicted the triumph of the human spirit in conflict with the supernatural — i.e., forces beyond their control. Likewise, Heartland features Kit in a similar conflict with the events and feelings from the past that she had no control over. This is good reading for fans of Vertigo and other intense, story-oriented comics. For mature readers, A+.

• "Winsor McCay Meets Die Hard," boasts Amaze Ink publisher, Dan Vado of Mister Blank. And, yes, I think that is an appropriate description. Written and illustrated by Chris Hicks, Mister Blank is a very stylish comic book. It tells the story of Sam Smith, an average-looking employee of N Corporation whose life takes a bizarre, exciting turn when he encounters a group of shadowy terrorists within his company. Hicks tells his adventure more with his chic art than he does with dialogue. This is a another intriguing example of graphic — as in visual — storytelling. A+

• Action Planet Comics presents Ande Parks' and Phil Hester's Uncle Slam & Fire Dog. In another just-for-fun slapstick parody comic book, Parks and Hester do a funny send-up of Captain America. Created in the '30s to "buoy the nation's morale," Uncle Slam went underground shortly thereafter. Now, 30 years later, he's back — but not necessarily in full possession of his faculties. With his faithful companion, Fire Dog (who is probably better equipped to fight crime), he is out to fight for the American Dream. If you have missed Ben Edlund's The Tick in the last few years, check out Uncle Slam — same sort of goofy fun, but with a twist all its own. The clean, easy-to-follow art enhances the fun. A

• Dark Horse Comics, in response to the relaunch of George Lucas' original Star Wars movie, is having the comic-book adaptation completely redrawn by Eduardo Barreto and Al Williamson. Interestingly enough, Dark Horse is releasing the trade paperback simultaneously with the comics. If you're a big Star Wars fan or collector, check out this new edition, which has been redone so that it matches the reworking of the film. Barretto and Williamson make a good team, and this new edition holds up nicely compared to the original. Recommended for completists but not necessary for all fans. A-

• For the action science-fiction crowd, there is Entity Comics' Omega Force. This super-team of the future takes on demons in a high-impact comic book by Jonah and Michael Cagley. Reasonably good art throughout. B.

• Also, there is Daemonstorm #1 from Caliber. Written by Joe Martin, with art by Don Hillsman, Daemonstorm is the story of a super-human force brought to life by aliens. Only the mightiest of Earth's warriors can save the planet. Very professional art splatters across the pages of this high-energy comic book. B+

• For the younger (at heart) set, Archie brings back Cheryl Blossom, now in her own series. Everyone who loved the "Love Showdown" story won't be disappointed with Cheryl's new series. Written by Dan Parent, with art by none other than Dan DeCarlo, this comic book has sure-fire hit with kids written all over it.

Read! Enjoy! And remember that comics can be fun and still be worthwhile. A+

Steve Ginsberg

"Verbally minimalist with addictively delightful art, Mister Blank has immediate appeal."

"If you believe the medium works best when combining graphic storytelling with the human condition, delve into Heartland."

Steve Ginsberg

Claude's Comics, 39 S. York Rd., Hatboro, PA 19040

• Even if Steve Bissette wasn't one of the nicest people in comics, it would still be my pleasure to introduce you to his beloved creations of yesteryear collected in SpiderBaby Comix #1. This Bissette guy has been toiling and putting his distinctive voice into his creations for 20+ years. Lucky you, he's going to share with you every creative kernel he deems worthy. Much of it is long out of print or never before published, including collaborative efforts with such notables as Alan Moore, Rick Veitch, and Michael Zulli.

Horror of horrors, little ones, this horrific material is "not for the squeamish" and is for "mature audiences" only. Guess that leaves most of us out. Sanctimonious vegetarians, in particular, may have to rethink their culinary convictions after reading the evocative story "Cries from the Vegetable Kingdom."

It's an anthology, a bibliography, and a retrospective filled with surprises and wholly entertaining.

• Poor Mister Blank is apparently living the middle-management nightmare of maintaining monotonous mounds of meaningless paperwork. A properly timed greeting from shapely co-worker Julie can, however, jumpstart a morning quicker than a cuppa caffeine. Clueless shlub Sam Smith (aka Mister Blank) doesn't even know that he's on probation with Julie, as a result of only saying, "Hi," when what she really wants is for him to get meaningful with her.

When two men garbed like The Shadow and carrying a mysterious suitcase emerge from the elevator, mild-mannered Sam is compelled to give chase. The only question is: Is this reality or merely an adventurous delusion of Smith's making?

Verbally minimalist — in fact, it's almost disappointing when word balloons appear several pages into the story — with addictively delightful art, this has immediate appeal. I suggest you try the first issue of this hard-to-"genrefy" series and see if you can avoid being hooked.

Heartland

• Garth Ennis has never been accused of pulling any punches, and Heartland is no exception. In a conflict like Ireland's "troubles," everyone has a perspective, and each one is "the truth." Sure, there is sudden violence, indiscriminate killing, and the like, but the real danger of the place is that "it lulls ye. It'll make ye think everything's goin' along, ye can go ahead an relax ... an' then it'll stick its boot right up your ae."

Dysfunctional families can be like that, too. It takes work and vigilance to keep the lid on familial hatreds, resentments, and jealousies. Relax for even a minute, and it can be more than bombs that destroy, as emotions long held in check explode to the surface. While the story is a little convoluted at first, the plots synthesize as the gut-wrenching dialogue steamrolls toward family therapy hour, where nothing is held back.

If you're looking for purely escapist entertainment, this may be too real and visceral for you. If, on the other hand, you believe the medium works best when combining graphic storytelling with the human condition, delve into Heartland.

Daemonstorm

• In Cheryl Blossom #1, our spoiled, petulant, ill-mannered and self-centered heroine (?) is in all her narcissistic glory when she and her brother inherit a decrepit country club from a favorite aunt they never met. The legendary creative team of Dan Parent and Dan DeCarlo give us a crisp, tightly scripted, and well-paced story of self-indulgence and self-absorption. Think of Cheryl Blossom as an even brattier version of Veronica Lodge. Unpleasant people abound, and, if you don't get enough of them in real life, by all means check out Cheryl Blossom.

• The first spin-off from the eclectically entertaining anthology Action Planet Comics features the robotic Dalmatian Fire Dog and the antics of his slightly clueless human sidekick, Uncle Slam.

Often told from the pooch's perspective, filled with snappy banter tinged with parody, and touching on political and social issues, this is a rapid-paced search for one of Uncle Slam's Golden Age companions. Also included is a Bret Blevins back-up tale, "My Dream Date with Uncle Slam."

• The first Love and Rockets comic book specifically produced for color, Maggie and Hopey Color Special is strikingly warm and visually minimalist. This issue asks the question, "Why do our friends and family always think they know when someone is bad for us, and why do we never listen?"

If you missed New Love and Whoa, Nellie, here is yet another chance to experience a Hernandez contribution to the medium. Don't miss it.

• Dark Horse reinvigorates the Star Wars saga in A New Hope — The Special Edition. The Empire is in the throes of a civil war. During one conflict, in which rebel spaceships strike from a hidden base, rebel spies manage to steal secret plans to the Empire's ultimate weapon, the Death Star. Suffused with enough power to destroy an entire planet, the plans to this armored space station can save Princess Leia's people and restore freedom to the galaxy.

Thus begins the epic adventure of the battle to restore the Empire, the maturation of Luke Skywalker, the garnering of "The Force," and the re-emergence of the Jedi Knights. You can decide for yourself if there are already too many titles mining this merchandising gold. If you had to pick only one, this adaptation of the original script might be just the place to start.

Vincent Perkins, Hero at Large, is "a librarian in his mid-60s. His wife just died and his life seems meaningless," as creator-publisher Andrew Dabb describes him. The story of this "everyman" is "great human interest stuff, Pulitzer stuff," intones the narrator. With accomplished art and slightly anthropomorphic characters, this should appeal to fans of Akiko, Arcana, Pakkin's Land, and Boondoggle. Symptom Comics, 1410 W. Harrisville Rd., Ogden, UT 84404.

If you're Jason 4 (a.k.a. Template), "once you let another into your mind, ... your reality falls into the hands of another." And what bizarre and anxious realities can be induced by creatures and government agencies with less than your best interests at heart? If you're into "psychotrons," freelance opportunists in your mind, a corrupt corporation, and rebel forces armed with a just cause, Template is the real deal. Head Press P.O. Box. 299019, #380, Lewisville, TX.

"Underscored by fiercely black humor and illustrated with at times terrifying detail, SpiderBaby #2 will put an edge into those long winter nights."

Magnus:* "Here's a comic book that's cleanly written, advances a well-thought-out storyline and, mercy me, makes a little damned sense."

Tom Lawton

• SpiderBaby Comix #2 — It may be the harsh New England weather, it may be the forced sharing of the hemisphere with the perpetually frustrated and frustrating Red Sox, or it may just be plain old hardscrabble contrariness that makes Vermont resident S.R. Bissette a tad crotchety. There was an awful lot of impedimenta to wade through before one could actually get down to reading the second issue of SpiderBaby Comix. Warnings about text, cover art, "mature readers" labels, and copyright info all stood in the way of the horrific good time promised by the press release. Happily, comics fans, especially those who might have grown up enjoying the EC horror titles or Warren's vampire books, won't have to worry about the extraneous material. This is not to say, however, that SpiderBaby Comix is the good, clean fun of those titles. As the man says, these are for mature readers, but those who can handle the context and language will enjoy the truly nightmarish quality of "Saying Grace" or the Toxic Shock Syndrome revenge tale "Cottonmouth" (brilliant title, by the way). The issue's centerpiece, "A Life in Black and White," the result of a challenge from fellow creator Scott McCloud, is a bleak story of a life without luck, or at least it seems that way until we realize that there are forces higher than mere caprice at work. Underscored by fiercely black humor and illustrated with at times terrifying detail, SpiderBaby #2 will put an edge into those long winter nights in New England or anywhere.

• From the pages of Action Planet Comics comes Uncle Slam and Fire Dog #1, the first full-length comic book featuring slightly demented Golden Age throwback Uncle Slam. Created years ago to be a champion of America, Uncle Slam now finds himself unwanted and about to be usurped by a newer, flashier government-created hero. In Slam's fictional present, the federal government is controlled by shadowy agencies "hell bent on maintaining their power base." Umm — "fictional present"? Anyway, joined by the highly intelligent, robotic Fire Dog — who finds himself in competition for the coveted CBG Cutest Dog in the Price Guide Cup this month — Uncle Slam overcomes teen assassins and governmental antagonisms and even wins over a very attractive FBI agent. While not as downright goofy as The Tick, Uncle Slam does mine a similar vein with impressive results. Creator Ande Parks crafts a stylistic hybrid of Golden Age simplicity and modern irony. If that sounds like gibberish to you, and it probably should, just trust me on this one: Uncle Slam and Fire Dog will prove to be a lot of fun.

• Star Wars: A New Hope — The Special Edition — If Star Wars wasn't such a great movie to begin with, this would really smell like a bag job to me. Redrawing a comic-book adaptation 20 years later just to accommodate what's likely to amount to five minutes of previously unseen footage? Oh, well. I suppose if George Lucas can tinker for years rather than actually make new movies, Dark Horse has every right to adapt an adaptation. But, in the end, I'd rather see the movie again.

• Daemonstorm #1 — I get worried when a comic book's biggest selling point is the cover artist. That's the case here. Todd McFarlane's name is promoted in big, bold letters, which is a shame, because Don Hillsman's illustrations are far superior. Nice, crisp lines and beautiful inking make Daemonstorm a joy to look at. Unfortunately, there's a story that goes with the art. The scriptless ashcan would provide readers with the opportunity to write their own story — which might prove more enjoyable than the one written by Joe Martin. As a caveat, I have to add that the script provided was less an actual script than an extraordinarily tedious prose piece. Stripped of its needless exposition, Martin's script might ultimately work. In the form in which I read it, however, it is clear that more than Todd McFarlane will be needed to enjoy Daemonstorm.

• The same symptoms ail Omega Force II. Some really nice art by Jonah Cagley is undercut by the humdrum storytelling of his brother, Mike. While not as fantastically convoluted as Daemonstorm, Omega Force II still suffers from a drab tale centered on over-familiar hero characters. "Archetype"? Hardly.

• Just when I was mourning the absence of quality super-hero comics this month, along comes the late-posted Magnus #1, part of Acclaim's Valiant Heroes relaunch. While many science-fiction and super-hero comics read as though their creators found coming up with interesting ideas secondary to coming up with cool character names or titles, here's a comic book that's cleanly written, advances a well-thought-out storyline and, mercy me, makes a little damned sense. This new series features a Magnus who seems a bit off-balance. Heroes driven mad by their inner demons are nothing new, but writer Tom Peyer manages to avoid tortured and tortuous clichés. Excellent art by Mike McKone and Mark McKenna make this a complete package. Nice work all the way around.

• I am not familiar with Garth Ennis and Steve Dillon's work on Hellblazer and thought that I might be at a disadvantage when reading Heartland, due to its connections with the Vertigo title. Just one of the outstanding points of Heartland is that it can be read and enjoyed without any knowledge of character "Kit" Ryan's history. Readers who have kept up on Hellblazer may catch nuances unavailable to the rest of us but, as a dramatic, unsettling, and, finally, touching story, Heartland is a brilliant bit of work.

Set in Belfast, Ireland, Heartland places the apartheid of family in the foreground while the ongoing apartheid of nations ceaselessly careens behind and around its characters. Kit Ryan returns home and finds herself forced to take sides in an emotional Cold War fought between her siblings. Matters are made worse by romantic betrayals, and all the time, outside, British soldiers patrol the neighborhoods in APCs and street thugs blow off kneecaps in the guise of "justice."

DC did not supply a complete ashcan, so the resolutions of this dense story remain unknown until publication. Though I rarely reread comics that I have already reviewed, I anticipate savoring Heartland for a long time to come.

• Mr. Blank — No offense to the publishers who submit to this section, but their descriptions of their comic books often provide no clue of why anyone should want to read them and sometimes are as unreadable as the comics themselves. You would think, therefore, that Slave Labor Graphics' info sheet on Mr. Blank by Chris Hicks would have me kicking up my heels in joy. Clear, concise, and relatively free of hyperbole, it really entices me to read through Mr. Blank. But, no, it just annoys me. Why? Because it describes the comic book much better than I can! "Film noir meets Winsor McCay"? Perfect! So what can I add? Well — that I liked it a whole bunch, that I enjoyed Hicks' depiction of Mr. Blank as a schlumpy Everyman, though I think he might be built a little too well — that could just be the cut of his suit, however — and that I hope he finally clues in to the fact that coworker Julie has a thing for him. Really, it could be a day at the office for any of us until Blank (aka Sam Smith) runs into a pair of shady characters who both look remarkably like The Shadow (when he wasn't clouding men's minds, of course). The illustrations really do have an art deco Little Nemo look, and the black-and-white of the review copy adds to the noir-ish feeling. Mr. Blank is "stylish, fun-filled, and action-packed," and I wonder if I need to footnote reviews.

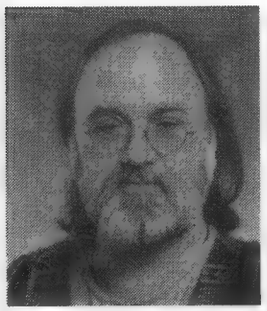
COMIC BOOK PRICES - SILVER AGE TO PRESENT

On Top Of The Trends

IN THE EYE OF THE BEHOLDER



Cliff Biggers

"Since civilians can't understand that comics actually have an aesthetic value and desirability, they assume that the only reason old comics are worth any money at all is that they're old."

What makes a back issue valuable? A collector, that's what. If there's no one looking for a comic book, no matter how rare it is, it's not going to become valuable.

In the early 1980s, I spent a fair amount of time rummaging through back-issue bins, looking for comic books that I would enjoy reading — but they had to be issues that would cost me next to nothing.

I started out with pre-hero Marvels. For a buck or so a comic book, I accumulated a collection of hundreds of pre-hero Marvels, some dating back to the early 1950s. The most expensive comic book in my accumulation (I don't know that it was organized enough to call it a collection) was a Fair copy of Tales of Suspense #1 that I paid $5 for. Why was it so cheap, even though it was published in the 1950s, at the beginning of the Silver Age? It was so cheap, because no one wanted it — then.

By the second or third convention, though, dealers had started to catch on to the fact that these comic books were selling and not just to me but to many other fans who realized that there was prime artwork in these underpriced issues. Suddenly, $1 comic books became $5 comic books, and $5 comic books became $20 comic books. Before too long, I found myself priced out of the pre-hero Marvel market.

From there, I moved on to DC science-fiction titles. I probably got in two years' worth of collecting before convention prices began to go up. Then it was DC war titles — then ACG horror — then Marvel cowboy comics —

Now, when I go to conventions, I rarely find anything to buy. Why? Because there are no comics genres that no one else is looking for; every sort of comic book has a following, it seems, and there are no cheap comic books from the 1950s any more.

So why am I complaining about all this here? I'm not, really; I knew at the time I started buying these titles that it was inevitable that they would increase in cost eventually, so I wasn't surprised. But there is a point to this story, honest!

Rarity, age, condition — all of these are important in determining the price of a comic book. But nothing is more important than the collector. If there isn't a collector for a book, then it's worthless.

I got a piece of e-mail recently from Michael Stivers wondering why the price on his platinum Spider-Man #1 had fallen so much recently. I have a very good answer, but it's not one that Michael's going to like. Here it is, though: No one really wants it. The only way that comic book will sell is if the price falls to a level that someone is willing to part with in order to add that issue to his or her collection.

Back in the mid-'80s, the average minor independent comic book sold 10,000 copies. Today, the average minor independent sells about 3000 copies. This means that it's doubtful that the average 1980s independent title will increase in value. In fact, most of the comic books from that era are worthless except as bulk sales items (you know, the fodder used to fill out 5/$1 bags on sales racks). There isn't an audience for them.

A customer came into my store recently with a few issues of some Gold Key funny-animal comic books from the 1960s, figuring that their age would translate into hefty price tags. He was chagrined and dismayed when I offered him only a few dollars for the stack-and that was only because I thought they might be fun to read.

"Why can't you give me more?" he asked.

"Because I can't sell them," I replied. I then tried to explain about supply and demand, giving a basic lesson on Comics Economics.

"But they're really old."

"Doesn't matter."

"But they're as old as Fantastic Four #1, and it's worth thousands of dollars."

The conversation never really went any further; we kept making our respective points until he grew tired of the exchange and left. (Hey, it was my store; I wasn't going anywhere.)

That's the problem with the mainstream media's emphasis on the value of old prices; since civilians can't understand that comics actually have an aesthetic value and desirability, they assume that the only reason old comics are worth any money at all is that they're old. Thus, they presume that anything that is old must be valuable. Until they learn more about the art of comics (a phrase that most civilians consider an oxymoron), they'll continue to think like this.

But it's also a problem that continues to prevail in the comics market. There are some who think that because a comic book is a few years old, it has a certain value. The downside of collecting is that there are a lot of valueless comic books; many titles from both independent and major publishers have virtually no value whatsoever. (Tried to sell a copy of US 1, or Sonic Disruptors, or Daffy Khadaffy?).

The upside, though, is that there's nothing to say that these titles will be valueless forever. (Well, I have a pretty good hunch about US 1, but still —) Remember, the comic books that I used to buy for 50¢ each or less back in the early '80s are now demanding primo prices. I remember when you could buy 1970s Marvels in bulk loads for 5¢ each; now some of them are actually worth real money. All that has to happen is that someone has to want the comic books. And it's certainly possible that current bottom-of-the-barrel books will become desirable in the future; heck, I've seen public displays of 1970s music nostalgia, so anything is possible!

Next time you're sorting through that junk box of comic-book clunkers, here's an idea: Rather than trying to sell them, just bag 'em up, pack them away, label "Do not disturb for 20 years," and check 'em out again then. You could be in for a surprise. And, if the worst occurs, and the comic books are still worthless — well, at least you'll have a treat for any kids in the family who'll be able to see what comics were like in the old days.

PRICE GUIDE

Marvel A-F

The prices given here are for near-mint comics. This is the most acceptable and general condition a collector desires for newer comics. A near-mint copy is almost perfect — with almost no signs of wear or aging. There might be one or two tiny defects discernable only on close examination (for example, an extremely slight flaking on the spine).

The condition of comics is a vital factor in determining comics values. The primary conditions used in grading are "poor" (undesirable in most collections), "fair," "good," "fine," and "mint." Other grades, including the "near-mint" we use, are steps between these. A "fair" issue would be worth about 20% of our price. A "fine" issue would be worth about 60% of our price. And a "mint" copy would be worth 120% of our price.

Note: Changes that occured between our last CBG Price Guide and this one are indicated by a + or - sign. Prices that went up from our last issue have the + sign by the title. Prices that went down from our last issue have the - sign by the title.

Why are there shaded areas in the price guide?

We shade certain titles to call attention to price changes, character appearances, and other interesting facts, with many of these trivia tidbits indicated by the heading Didja know?

For example, a number of early Marvel comics have increased in value dramatically this month, including the first 14 issues of Amazing Spider-Man. In addition, price increases (and a few decreases) have been noted for a number of titles published by Marvel in the mid-'70s, including Amazing Adventures.

Trader Tips

The Trader ads in CBG are an easy and economical way to advertise. Simply design your ad in a space that is 8½" wide by 8½" high and send it along with payment ($39.00 per Trader space) and complete reference form to:

COMICS BUYER'S GUIDE
Advertising Department
700 E. State Street
Iola, WI 54990-0001

We'll reduce your ad to the proper size and place it in the issue(s) you request. If no specific issue(s) is requested, we'll run your ad in the next available issue.

Keep in mind that the better your ad looks when you send it to us, the better it will look when it is reduced and published in CBG.

But I Digress

14. Check off all the following places that you think Seduction of the Innocent will be playing:

Street corners 92 (42.01%)
San Diego Comic-Con 76 (34.70%)
Chicago Comicon 71 (32.42%)
The Disney Channel 47 (21.46%)
Atlanta Fantasy Fair 44 (20.09%)
Great Eastern Cons 38 (17.35%)
Caesars Palace 36 (16.44%)
Dragon Con 29 (13.24%)

Single votes were also received for WonderCon (where it's actually played) and The Sci-Fi Channel.

At the time that the poll was taken, "Seduction" and San Diego were on the outs. Since that time, however, the two groups kissed and made up. So the 34% who foresaw "Seduction" playing at the SDCC — despite the then-current friction — were exactly right.

Haven't seen "Seduction" there for a while, though. Return engagement, anybody?

15. The year 2002 will seem most like:

Space: 1999 64 (29.22%)
John Byrne's 2112 39 (17.81%)
2000 AD 32 (14.61%)
Spider-Man 2099 24 (10.96%)
Jack Kirby's 2001 23 (10.50%)

Single votes were also received for Blade Runner, Terminator, 1992, Max Headroom, and Clockwork Orange.

Well, we're going to have to wait and see on that one.

16. In 2002, Spider-Man 2099 will be in:

The 3/$1 box 106 (48.40%)
2099 49 (22.37%)
2109 31 (14.16%)
2100 17 (7.76%)
2101 14 (6.39%)
2105 7 (3.20%)

What I wrote at the time was, "Yeah, well, screw you. What do you know, anyway?"

Well, quite a lot, apparently.

Actually, before the 2099 world went bust, the intention was that we were going to jump the entire line forward a couple years to — in fact — 2101.

But then Joey Cavalieri was let go, a number of creators went with him, the 2099 line collapsed, and now shadows of the characters tromp through the World of Tomorrow group title.

Spider-Man 2099, after having a personality and speech pattern carefully constructed over four dozen issues, now speaks no differently from the 1990s Spider-Man.

And the supporting cast has been killed or distorted beyond recognition. I can barely stand to look at it.

17. I think my comics will be worth more 10 years from now than they are now:

Agree 154 (70.32%)
Disagree 60 (27.40%)

18. I think the bottom is going to fall out of the collectors' market:

Agree 126 (57.53%)
Disagree 90 (41.10%)

I would love to know — now that the bottom, indeed, has fallen out of the collectors' market — how many people who felt their comics would be worth more 10 years down the road would voice the same opinion now.

19. Ten years from now, the average reader will be buying comics:

To read the stories 130 (59.36%)
To look at the art 62 (28.31%)
For collectible value 50 (22.83%)

Well, I have no idea where we stand on this one. Only you guys can answer it.

20. But I Digress will be:

A fond memory 92 (42.01%)
Written by me 78 (35.62%)
Written by Shana David 26 (11.87%)
Drawn by Todd McFarlane 13 (5.94%)
An unfond memory 6 (2.74%)

As before, I tend to side with the folks who think it'll be a fond memory, since I have great difficulty envisioning my doing this column 10 years hence.

I am:

20-something 99 (45.21%)
30-something 69 (31.51%)
40-something 21 (9.59%)
Teen-something 21 (9.59%)
Over 40-something 3 (1.37%)
Kid-something 1 (0.46%)

Considering the way comics have been hemorrhaging readers, one wonders whether those demographics remain accurate.

I buy comics:

Combo of story/art 122 (55.71%)
Mostly for the story 76 (34.70%)
Investment value 44 (20.09%)
Because I'm a Marvel Zombie 11 (5.02%)
Mostly for the art 9 (4.11%)
Because they're written by PAD 2 (0.91%)

How much would you like to bet that the 20% who bought for investment battle have dwindled in number significantly?

I am:

A fan 163 (74.43%)
Inigo Montoya. You killed my father. Prepare to die 40 (18.26%)
A professional in the comics industry 31 (14.16%)
The pirate king 8 (3.65%)
The president of Marvel 2 (0.91%)
The very model of a modern major general 2 (0.91%)
An editor at CBG 1 (0.46%)
Mark Gruenwald's father 1 (0.46%)

The one from Grueny's father is a little tough to take in retrospect.

Peter David, writer of stuff, can be written to at To Be Continued Inc., P.O. Box 239, Bayport, NY 11705.

H. LAYOUT and design services are provided by Krause Publications for advertisers who do not submit camera-ready copy. Due to the creative and subjective nature of these services, credit will not be allowed for conceptual variations.

I. GRADING: Items offered in any ad must be properly described as to condition, conforming to the standards set forth in Comics Buyer's Guide Price Guide. Advertisers may also exercise the option of grading offerings by applying a unique personal system, providing the standards applied are detailed in the ad to avoid confusion.

J. RETURN PRIVILEGE: Except as otherwise specified in any ad, an advertiser must accept the return of any merchandise postmarked within ten working days of its receipt by a customer.

K. P.O. BOX ADS are allowed, but the permanent home address, phone number and place of business of the advertiser must be filed with the publisher before advertisements may be printed.

O. SPACE RESERVATIONS available for camera ready ads only. Must be made prior to ad deadline. Reserved space must be paid for even if ad does not arrive on time.

P. PRE-PRINTED INSERTS are available in Comics Buyer's Guide. Inquire for additional information and technical specifications.

R. PROOF OF PUBLICATION: Tear sheets of new display ads are mailed to those advertisers requesting this service. We regret we cannot provide this service to classified advertisers.

S. NOTE: All advertising orders are accepted subject to the terms and provisions of the current rate card. Krause Publications, Inc. reserves the right to decline advertising or suspend advertising privileges for such periods of time as in its discretion it sees fit, for any reason, whatsoever, irrespective of the validity of the reasons for such declination or suspension. The forwarding of an order is construed as acceptance of all rates and conditions in effect at the time the advertising is submitted. The publisher will not be bound by any conditions, printed or otherwise, appearing on any order for advertising space, billing instructions or copy instructions which conflict with its policies. Advertisers and advertising agencies assume liability for all content (including text representation and illustrations) of advertisements printed, and also assumes responsibility of any claims arising therefrom made against the publisher. It is the advertiser's or agency's responsibility to obtain appropriate releases on any item or individual pictured in their advertising. All agreements are subject to strikes, accidents, acts of God, or other contingencies beyond the publisher's control. The publisher reserves the right to edit any advertising copy to conform with its standard advertising policies, and to reject any ad which in its opinion is unethical or objectional for any reason.

Picking up from last week, we're following up on the But I Digress poll, conducted in these very pages four years ago. The original notion was for readers to predict the state of the comics industry a decade into the future. Since life is — to put it mildly — uncertain, I thought it might be worthwhile to take a look at how a passage of less than half a decade has affected the industry.

"This is a cyclical industry in that people tend to get 'cyc' of you, particularly if you're hugely hyped, ship comics late, and/or have an art style that is — hotly debated."

— Peter David

How's That Again?

"Only one of us is gon- alk out of here — un- own steam — and, e me!"

ain America in Suspense #92

7. The following person will be revealed to be the Anti-Christ:

Rob Liefeld 78 (35.62%)
Todd McFarlane 20 (9.13%)
Tom DeFalco 14 (6.39%)
Peter David 12 (5.48%)
Jim Shooter 11 (5.02%)
John Byrne 10 (4.57%)
Bill Clinton 6 (2.74%)
Respondent 3 (1.37%)
Fabian Nicieza 2 (0.91%)
Gary Groth 2 (0.91%)
Tony Isabella 2 (0.91%)
Ross Perot 2 (0.91%)

Single votes went to, among others, Mike Carlin, Mark Gruenwald, Paul Levitz, Erik Larsen, Superman, Lobo, Damian, Rich Buckler, Dave Sim, Sam Donaldson, Pat Buchanan, Sinead O'Connor, George Bush, Macaulay Culkin, and Cat Yronwode.

The results of this survey was, to me, the first major indicator that Rob Liefeld had major, major problems ahead of him. Keep in mind that Image had only been around a year or so, and the numbers coming in were still fairly formidable. Nonetheless, Rob clearly had a big-league public relations problem. At the time of the survey, I was astounded at the reaction. Considering all the flak Marvel was taking at the time, and — considering the vituperation heaped upon the editorial line in general and the X-titles in specific — I had been certain that either Tom DeFalco or Bob Harras had had a lock on this one. For that matter, so did they.

The fact that Rob not only claimed the top spot, but did so by such a thumping wide margin, indicated a reaction that went beyond simply disliking someone's work and tripping straight into full-fledged hostility.

And it would seem that the acrimony has only grown since then. His work for Marvel has been greeted with the sort of reaction generally reserved for known felons. Former friends are lining up either to sue him or to take turns attacking him in print.

In any event, the BID poll was something of a signal flare to Rob four years ago that disaster was in the air. I don't know if he could have done anything to avoid it. This is a cyclical industry in that people tend to get "cyc" of you, particularly if you're hugely hyped, ship comics late, and/or have an art style that is — hotly debated.

On the other hand, no one's career was deader than John Travolta's, and he came back thanks to Pulp Fiction. And, y'know, Quentin Tarantino is a big comics fan, so who knows? They'd make an interesting team. Bad rap Rob Liefeld all you want, but you have to admit that he draws at least as well as Tarantino acts.

8. The following title (s) will probably be just about hitting the stands.

Youngblood#4 108 (49.32%)
An X-Men title that doesn't yet exist 103 (47.03%)
Cerebus #300 68 (31.05%)
Ms. Mystic #8 36 (16.44%)
Tom DeFalco's Two-Fisted Adventures #6 6 (2.74%)

Well, Youngblood #4 came out — eventually. I don't think Ms. Mystic #8 ever surfaced. TDTFA doesn't exist. And as for the X-Men title that doesn't yet exist — well, heck, in any given week there's a new X-Men title. So the odds seem stupendously good that there will be a new X-Men title hitting the stands — presuming, of course, that there are any X-titles. Unless, of course, we discover that, in fact, Ron Perelman is the Anti-Christ and Marvel completely evaporates into the ozone layer.

9. The standard Marvel comic book is 32 pages for $1.25. Ten years from now, should there still be Marvel comics, the standard one will be:

32 pages 99 (45.21%)
24 pages 53 (24.20%)
16 pages 38 (17.35%)
48 pages 20 (9.13%)
64 pages 3 (1.37%)
A disc 3 (1.37%)

(There were 17 other votes for various page lengths.) The standard Marvel comic remains at 32 pages.

And will cost:

$2.50 80 (36.53%)
$3.95 40 (18.26%)
1500 Yen 16 (7.31%)
$1.75 12 (5.48%)
$2.95 4 (1.83%)
$4.95 4 (1.83%)
$5 4 (1.83%)
$2 4 (1.83%)
$10 3 (1.37%)
$1 2 (0.91%)
$1.25 2 (0.91%)
$1.50 2 (0.91%)
$3.75 2 (0.91%)

Single votes were also recorded for, among others, $3.25, $5.95, and $3.50.

At the time, I wrote, "So it would seem that the future Marvel package would be 32 pages for $2.50 — a 100% increase over the next 10 years, and getting nothing in addition in terms of editorial matter — unless, of course, Marvel expands on the present 22 pages of story and art by cutting back on advertising revenue (yeah, right)."

Well, as of this point, the average Marvel comic book is somewhere in the neighborhood of $1.95. I think it fairly safe to say that we're looking at an average price of $2.50 by the time we hit the 21st century.

10. If Warners ever unloads DC Comics, it will probably be bought by:

The Japanese 67 (30.59%)
Marvel 37 (16.89%)
Jim Shooter 24 (10.96%)
Disney 22 (10.05%)
Ross Perot 11 (5.02%)
Image 7 (3.20%)
Seduction of the Innocent 4 (1.83%)
Krause Publications 2 (0.91%)
Ted Turner 2 (0.91%)
Malibu 2 (0.91%)

Single votes were also recorded for, among others, Murphy Brown, Three X-Editors, Archie Comics, Dave Sim, Eastman and Laird, and Nabisco.

Well, this is a stark example of how much things change. As Marvel Comics teeters on the brink of bankruptcy, the prospects of Marvel's buying DC seem right up there with the likelihood of Bob Dole calling for a recount.

In fact, if anything, we might see the opposite occurring. The notion of Marvel's being purchased by DC doesn't seem completely out of line. God only knows whether Time Warner would want to get sucked into the financial morass that currently constitutes Marvel Comics, but, then again, stranger things have happened. Not much stranger, I'll grant you, but stranger.

11. The majority of comics will be produced by:

Writer/artist teams 170 (77.63%)
Writer/artists 42 (19.18%)

Well, I haven't done a survey or anything, but I think the majority of comics remains in the hands of writer/artist teams. Then again, technology has a way of levelling the playing field, and I wouldn't be at all surprised if "art programs" helped writers to become artists with as great a facility as artists become writers.

12. The majority of comics produced will feature:

Characters owned by the publisher and produced as straight work-for-hire (example, Marvel): 121 (55.25%)
Characters owned by the creator and published by someone else, wherein the publisher assumes most of the risk (example, Epic): 42 (19.18%)
Characters owned by the creator and published by someone else, wherein the publisher is essentially a hired hand (example, Image): 40 (18.26%)
Characters owned by the creator, published by the creator (example: Cerebus): 13 (5.94%)

At this point, the majority of comics — in terms of market share, if not necessarily variety of titles — are produced by Marvel and DC. And it is, of course, an interesting development that founders of Image Comics are back doing work-for-hire for Marvel. Granted, it's work-for-hire with unprecedented freedom, but it's work-for-hire just the same.

13. Check off all of the following which will actively be used as marketing gimmicks:

Trading/hologram cards 135 (61.64%)
Signed limited editions 134 (61.19%)
Pre-bagged comics 129 (58.90%)
Hologram covers 129 (58.90%)
Foil covers 121 (55.25%)
Multiple covers 114 (52.05%)
Talking covers 108 (49.32%)
Flexidiscs 97 (44.29%)
Scratch and sniff 96 (43.84%)
Pop-up books 6 (2.74%)
Floppy disks 4 (1.83%)
Holograms 4 (1.83%)
Multiple endings, same story 3 (1.37%)
Virtual Reality 2 (0.91%)
#0 Origin Issues 2 (0.91%)

Single votes were also received for, among others: Covers but no pages, lower prices (oh, dream on), recycled comics, multiple editions of the same story but with different artists (now there's a thought), and — of all things — dinner with the artist.

It might be my imagination, but it seems to me that we're seeing fancy-shmancy promotional junk with less and less frequency. It may be that such gimcracks have run their course. Variant covers still seem popular, but the buying public appears sick of foil covers, holograms, and other tricks that have questionable sales impact but jack the cover price up by a buck or more.
